SPROUL-WOOD ALLIANCE BOTHERS

NEW YORK, May 18—The biggest event in pre-convention campaigns was transpiring in Pennsylvania or it wasn't. It depended upon your sources of information.

According to one story Senator Boise Penrose's domination of the state Republican organization and incidentally his influence in national politics was in the balance. The Senator's friends, however, contend that whatever action is taken by the Pennsylvania Republicans in the primaries today would only strengthen Penrose's position. The situation appeared to be so involved that only the events at the Chicago convention will furnish a solution.

An alliance between Wood and Governor Wm. G. Sproul was effected some time ago whereby the governor was to the first choice of the 76 delegates and Wood the second choice. Just one-half of the regular organization delegates were on this program.

In the case of the other half they preferred to take their instructions from Penrose. Governor Sproul's forces put up a rival slate to oppose these 38 delegates. There is no enmity between Penrose and Sproul and no contest to decide the superiority in Pennsylvania. Penrose put Knox forward in good faith as a strong compromise candidate who could compose both wings of the Republican party. The organization slate has not been "tampered" with.

VIRTUAL STATE OF WAR EXISTS IN IRELAND: ADDITIONAL TROOPS USED

LONDON, May 18—A crisis in northwest and southern Ireland apparently is developing rapidly. Indications were that General MacReady had begun his long expected campaign to restore order on the island. Thousands of fresh troops were being distributed in the west and south, dispatches said. At the same time the government was reported ready to adopt drastic measures in Londonderry. A large body of troops arrived in Londonderry last night following three nights of rioting between Unionists and Sinn Feiners. Soldiers were thrown around the disorderly areas. Citizens remained on the streets all night.

"Existence of a state of war" was beginning to be realized by everybody in Ireland. In some quarters proclamation of martial law was expected.

RAILROAD STRIKE AVERTED SAYS
SHEA: MEN WILL AWAIT AWARD

CHICAGO, May 18—That the possibility of a railroad strike has been averted as a result of the railroad owners willingness to grant wage increases for their employees was expressed here by railroad union executives. Union leaders said the question now is how much of an increase the Railroad Labor Board is willing to grant. They believe the public will suffer for the increase in the shape of increased traffic rates. "The situation is much relieved," according to Timothy Shea, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen. "It means that the possibility of a strike has been lessened and that the nation has been greatly relieved," he said.

JOHN D. JR. DINES HUMBLBY

NEW YORK, May 18—Managers of Broadway restaurants were struck dumb when the news that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had eaten in an automatic restaurant was broken to them. Rockefeller following a meeting of the Inter-church movement managers went to dinner in an automat restaurant with a group of preachers.

TONY CHERILLO
FOUND GUILTY
BY JURYCelebrated Pelican Insurance
Case Now Occupies Attention
of Criminal Courts

HAIR PULLINGS SPLIT 50-50

Tony Cherillo, the Morrisdale man, who murderously assaulted Game Protectors Kelly and Davis when they went to search his brother Mike's home for guns, some two or three weeks ago, was convicted in criminal court yesterday of assault with intent to murder.

Cherillo attacked the officers with two knives, and seriously stabbed James Protector Davis before he was finally arrested. The defense set up a plea of insanity, but were unable to satisfy the jury that Cherillo was not fully accountable for his actions.

The case of Com. vs. M. J. Bennett, the noted Pelican Insurance company case was taken up this morning and will likely last a couple of days. The jury panel was exhausted in the attempt to secure a jury and Sheriff Gorman was compelled to summon several talesmen.

The Commonwealth is represented by District Attorney Arnold and Miller & Hartwick, while A. M. Liveright and A. R. Chase, Esq., are looking after Bennett's interest.

This case grows out of the operations of representatives of the Pelican Insurance company, a Philadelphia concern, in several sections of Clearfield county and several other counties in this region. It is alleged that the solicitors of the company sold life insurance on a health policy and cut up other diabolical contrivances to the statutes of Pennsylvania and the insurance laws of the state.

A double assault and battery case in which four women were the principals was declared a draw by the jury. Margaret Price prosecuted Carrie Cole while Margaret Beck was prosecutor in the case against Eva Cole. The verdict in each case was not guilty and prosecutrix and defendant each to pay one-half the costs.

Later her parents received a note saying she was safe and that she would be released on a ransom.

Borough Millage Increased For 1920 By Council Last EveningNO ACTION YET

CRISISReturn of the Roads To Virtual
Government Control Thought
To Be Only Solution

GOVERNMENT SLOW TO ACT

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Three separate government agencies today grappled with the railroad car shortage problem, endeavoring to avert serious impairment of the financial and industrial structure of the nation. The developments were:

1.—The Federal reserve board called a meeting to discuss what federal reserve banks can do in helping with the financial situation.

2.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission rushed to completion plans for drastic centralization of railroad control.

3.—Senate committee on appropriations and inter-state committee met with railroad executives to get first hand knowledge of car shortage situation.

With both the legislative and administrative branches of the government aroused to the vital need of action to keep the nation's transportation open to prevent a critical situation, the Inter-State Commerce Commission is expected within the next 24 hours to announce what practically will be re-establishment of government control of railroads.

Reports received by the Commission today from every section of the country confirmed the existence of an admittedly grave danger to industry and agriculture unless food and fuel supplies and the industrial output are made to move with far greater speed. It is now universally admitted by government officials that the only method of effecting relief is to increase the efficiency of railroad management by co-ordination of control.

The railway executives here state that they will agree to almost any measure, however drastic, that the commission decides necessary to place into effect.

The first step to be taken when the commission has completed its course of action will be throw all the railroad equipment of the country into a gigantic pool, for the joint use of all the carriers. Shipments of necessities of life will be given preference over all traffic moving on the railroads and over even passenger traffic if necessary.

This important move has practically been agreed to already by the railroads it is understood.

Valuable crops of foodstuff rotting in the fields; raw materials for industry held up at their sources with the possibility of extensive layoffs of labor; the coal output dangerously reduced; these are only three angles of the enormous problem confronting the country today as a result of the car shortage, according to the conservative view of officials who are in a too close contact with the situation to spread alarmist reports.

A report issued today by the geological survey showed that the partial paralysis in the transportation situation had resulted in coal production for industrial purposes reaching a low ebb. In some instances the effect of the transportation disability amount to reduction in output at the mines as much as 60 per cent during the past week. If this situation is not immediately remedied officials fear a coal famine will be added to the list of industrial problems and yardmen's strike on some of the principal railroads serves further to aggravate the situation. Although this strike apparently is at an end, reports received within the last few days indicate that many of the men have not returned to work. This serves greatly to hamper the movement of freight through railroad junctions from Kansas City and St. Louis to eastern cities.

Lloyd Owens spent the week end with friends in Curwensville.

"Dads" Hear Reports On Many Phases
Of Borough Business of Interest To
Our Taxpayers Generally

PASS NEW FIRE ZONE ORDINANCE

The regular session of Town Council held in the Borough building last evening was a very busy session and much business of interest to the taxpayers generally was transacted. President Fletcher presided at the meeting and seven members were present.

Street Commissioner Graham reported the general activities of the street crew and showed a great deal of repair work was being done throughout the town.

Borough Engineer Hess reported on sidewalk grades on McBride, Eighth, Linden and Witmer streets and progress of Leavy avenue drain. He also stated that Third street repaving was about in shape for starting.

Chairman Rosser of the Highway Department stated that the work of paving the alley alongside the borough buildings had been started and that they expected to begin work of building concrete curbs and gutters on Third street by Wednesday or Thursday.

Mr. Rosser also presented estimates of cost of proposed paving of Gulich avenue and South Fourth street, as prepared by Borough Engineer Hess. According to the engineer's figures the paving of Gulich avenue would cost approximately $4,300. The street to be paved is 680 feet long with a driveway 19 feet in width or a total of 1300 square yards. South Fourth street is 1500 feet in length and the proposed paving 22 feet in width or a total of 3500 square yards and could be paved at an estimated cost of $17,500.

Further action on these improvements was deferred for the present.

Borough Solicitor Urey reported that he had attended the Bell Telephone rate raise hearing at Harrisburg May 5th and outlined what had been done by the more than one hundred attorneys present representing protestants against the raise. The Solicitor said an association had been formed by the attorneys and five representatives selected to look after the interests of same before the Public Service Commission at subsequent meetings. This association decided that a fund of $25,000 would be necessary to conduct the people's case. Clearfield's share of this fund was fixed at $125. Mr. Urey recommended that this sum be raised by popular subscription inasmuch as the principal increase in Bell rates was on the tolls and affected but a small part of our community. The matter was referred to Burgess Chase for his action on the same.

The ordinance providing for the laying of the millage for 1920 was presented and read to council. The millage was fixed as follows:

General Boro fund	9 mills
Light and water fund	2 1/2 mills
Borough bond fund	6 1/4 mills
Total	17 1/4 mills

This is an increase of 2 1/4 mills over 1919 but was made absolutely necessary by increasing costs of labor and materials of all kinds. One mill was added to the bond fund to care for the Third street paving proposition; one and one-quarter mill was added to the General Borough fund to take care of increased cost and one-half mill was added to the Light and Water fund to take care of the advance necessary to increase in installation of new lights throughout the borough.

The Ordinance providing for the construction of concrete curbs and gutters on Third street was also unanimously passed.

An ordinance prescribing new fire zone limits was also presented and unanimously adopted. The ordinance was prepared at the request of Fire Chief Knepp. The ordinance is a highly important one and provides in part as follows:

Prescribing the limits wherein non-combustible buildings of non-combustible material and fire-proof roofs shall be erected, reconstructed or placed, providing penalties for violation of the ordinance and declaring any buildings erected, reconstructed or placed contrary to the provisions of this ordinance to be a public nuisance and abatable as such.

Be it ordained by the Council of the Borough of Clearfield in Council regularly assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by authority of the same.

Section 1. That none but buildings of non-combustible material and fire-proof roofs shall be erected, reconstructed or placed within that part of the borough of Clearfield bounded on the South by Walnut street, on the East by Fourth street, on the North by Bridge street, and on the West by the Susquehanna river, nor within a distance of 100 feet from either side of that part of Bigler avenue extending from Bridge street to Daisy street, nor within a distance of 150 feet from either side of Daisy street, nor within a distance of 150 feet from either side of that part of Nichols street extending from the Susquehanna river to Turnpike avenue.

Section 2. That no roofs of combustible material shall be reconstructed or replaced upon any structure within the above described limits.

Section 3. Any building erected, reconstructed or placed, or any roof reconstructed or replaced contrary to the provisions of this ordinance is hereby declared to be a public nuisance and abatable as such, and any person or persons, firm or corporation, either as principal or agent, violating any portion of this ordinance shall, upon conviction before the burgess or a Justice of the Peace be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than ten dollars per day for each day during which the ordinance is violated, and in default of the payment thereof, with costs, shall undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed thirty days.

Section 4. The council may issue temporary permits, revocable at any time by motion of council, for the building of temporary wooden structures or outhouses within the above described limits, provided plans are first submitted to and approved by the Council.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed. Ordained and enacted this seventeenth day of May, A. D. 1920.

The American Legion has set apart the week of May 17-24 for membership drive week and an earnest effort is being made to enroll all former service men in this worthy organization.

John Shade Post of Clearfield now has a membership of something over 250 and as there are more than twice that number of young men in this section eligible to membership in the Legion a determined effort will be made this week to round up as many as possible for the purpose of increasing the rolls of the local Post.

The American Legion is doing a great work for former service men and the advantages of membership therein will be more and more apparent as the years go by. Now is the time to join and all eligibles should not hesitate to do so.

Joe Johnson and Frank Jette of Philipsburg spent yesterday with friends here.

Misses Sidney McGregor and Alveda Walizer of Lock Haven are visiting their sister and aunt Mrs. George Jacobs on 12th street.

Mexico would make an ideal children's playground. The game of hide and seek as played by Villa, Carranza, et al proves it.

Yesterday's news dispatches told of President Wilson requesting to be wheeled out on the porch to view a circus parade. Even the President likes a circus or is it his second childhood?

It gives The Progress a great deal of pleasure to be able to give such service to Clearfield business men as it required to compose and publish an eight page section like the one carried today for the A. W. Leonardson Company. It is an added pleasure to co-operate with a firm like the A. W. Leonardson Company in a business venture which is destined to help break costs and alleviate present conditions which affect every citizen of this community.

Clearfield merchants in general are more than doing their part in the present emergency. Very few of them have failed to cut their profits to the bone. Fewer yet are they who have not recognized the daily newspaper as the medium for carrying bargain news to the people.

Certainly, with so many stores offering big reductions now is the time to buy economically. The A. W. Leonardson enterprise will be the most far reaching economy event of the season.

As campaign material Postmaster-General Burleson produced a somewhat nominal surplus for the Post Office in the past fiscal year. He did this partly by ignoring a debt to the railroads, for carrying parcels now sustained by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which alone establishes a serious deficit. His books are kept by methods, mostly, it is true, of Congressional devising, which would not be tolerated in any business corporation. His very surplus is made at the expense of the service.

Throughout the country the postal employees are dwindling under Mr. Burleson's waste and mismanagement, and from no fault of theirs the public service is suffering to an extent not paralleled in the post office department of any great nation or dominion in the world. Next to his bookkeeping surplus Mr. Burleson trusted to win popularity from the voters by a reduction in the first class postal rate from three cents to two. How gladly would we all have paid three cents to get a service only half as good as that of Great Britain, where a post card mailed in the business center of London before midday is delivered in any suburb not later than three o'clock in the afternoon!

Some people have an idea that there have been more cabinet changes made by President Wilson than in any other administration. There have so far been twenty men to serve in President Wilson's cabinet. There were considerably more changes during Roosevelt and Grant administrations. A total of twenty-nine men served in the cabinet of Theodore Roosevelt during the seven years he was in the White House. That was the high record in the country's history. Twenty-five changes were made during Grant's administration, and there were only seven portfolios at that time, whereas at present there are ten. President Tyler had twenty men in his cabinet, and in his time there were only six department heads. Grover Cleveland had eleven cabinet officers in his first terms and twelve during his second. Even George Washington had trouble in keeping men on the job. He made fifteen appointments, including four to fill the position of secretary of state.

Election day dawned bright and cheery this morning and every candidate with a contest on his hands was cheery. This evening by midnight there will be many among the "also rans" which class the Raftman's Journal discussed a few weeks ago when a few young upstarts had the temerity to enter the contests. The results of the election bid fair to contain a few surprises as there has been considerable juggling in the lineup of candidates in the last twenty-four hours. Some cliques, seeing that they were unable to carry only a few of their friends through, have rewritten their lists and eliminated those who were less "useful." This has been done in the legislative contest and in the delegate fight.

The Progress will carry the returns tomorrow as complete as it is possible to get them before press time which is three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Dickens as Social Reformer.
To my mind he is the greatest of the great writers of the world, and one of the greatest of the world has ever seen, was a man, a writer, one of the two greatest names of the modern literature of the world. That is with a reason, for all the intimacies of his time—and we are the intimacies of that time—had their origin in the social circumstances in which the working people lived—in London, of course, which he knew best of all, but in like degree all over the country—Viscount Burnham.

Uncle Dick, a brother, fond of children, was a great favorite with his little nieces and nephews, so when the new baby came and papa told them that the stork had left it at their house, Buddy said through his teeth: "Too bad the stork didn't know where Uncle Dick lives!"

Welfare of Women and Children
One of First Objects of Movement.

PEDDLING her babies on the streets of Shanghai in the same manner as she would vend fruit is the desperate expedient to which this Chinese mother has been reduced by poverty. Any chance passerby can buy one or both for a price that would be considered ridiculous under less tragic circumstances.

While there have been cases of poor mothers in America being forced by necessity to "sell" their babies, such "sales" have been legal transfers to the custody of properly investigated persons. The child sale pictured here is on the level with any street basket peddling. Girl babies are sold into slavery in China.

Upon the character and financial condition of the first purchaser to come along depends the future of these children—whether they will be sold into a good home or into slavery. The church group of the Interchurch World Movement have made the welfare of women and children one of the first of their objectives. And as objective is the educating of the backward races to develop their resources and improve their standards of living so that the sick, starving babies will be a thing of the past.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat, which clogs kidneys, then back hurts and bladder bothers you

Most of us forget that the kidneys like the bowels get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally. If we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, trip liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sort of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and sodium to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so that no bladder irritation is pending.

Jad Salts is famous in every part of the world for its effectiveness in making a detrital effort on the water-circulating system. It is the only salt that cleans the kidneys, cleans the blood, and cleans the system.

A well-known local druggist has sold lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming their troubles while it is only trouble.

UNION MEETINGS MAKE A GOOD START

The union meeting held in the first church last evening was well attended and the congregation was into the spirit of the occasion and sang Rev. Mr. S. A. Chittenden's hymn, "The Union is the Strength of the People." Rev. Mr. H. A. S. gave a most interesting and instructive address on the text, "The Union is the Strength of the People." The plan of the evening was to have a social hour after the meeting, but this was not possible on account of the late hour.

Heavy Milkers are Summer Fed

Look up the production records of cows that show a big milk flow year after year and you will find that they are all on Purina. These owners have solved the old summer problem. Alone it can't produce much milk flow because cows can't consume sufficient grass to supply the summer problem. The picture on grass varies throughout the season.

These inequalities of a grass ration are perfectly corrected by Purina Cow Chow.

It not only makes the milk flow 25%—but it is also absolutely safe and pure. It is the only feed that makes the average cow produce 10% more milk per day at a added cost of about 6c.

BOLSHEVIKS FETTER LIBERTY

Theories Leaders of the Movement Lay Down and Put into Practice, Fly in the Face of All Human Experience.

Article XXIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

All the world except the bolshevik rulers of Russia is old-fashioned—hating the times. We still cling to the old superstition that the people should be the sovereigns, that public officials are public servants, that the safest plan of government is that form of government which is nearest to the people. In the United States each citizen has one vote. He has a vote for the men who make the local laws, the city or village ordinances; a vote for the men who enforce the ordinances, the mayor; a vote for the representatives in the state legislature, where the laws are made; for the governor, who enforces the state laws; a vote for the congressmen and senators, who enact the national laws and formulate the national policies; a vote for the president, who carries out the supreme law of the land. While it is true that in the case of the president, we vote for electors who elect the president, there has not been a single case wherein an elector has voted other than he was instructed by the people. We come together in political parties, present platforms, and every citizen has a chance to register his opinion of men and measures. The citizen has a right to vote at primary elections and register his choice for the party candidates and for the delegates to the conventions which formulate the party platforms.

Bolshevik Argument Unsound.

The bolsheviks point out that political parties do not live up to their platforms; that candidates for office default in their promises after they are elected; that representative democracy is frequently not representative of and responsive to the people. We know that there is some truth in this criticism, but we know that it is our fault. We have the power to express our wants, to record our will. We also have the power to punish our betrayal. We can recall from office recalcitrant public servants; we can add to our legislation and take over the power to initiate laws, and compel the reference of legislation back to the people before it can become operative as law. Our public officials are only our agents; we hire them, we pay them; we can fire them, disgrace them and punish them if they fail to obey our instructions. Such is our power. If we do not use the power intelligently and effectively it is our fault. If we are indifferent to the rights we possess and fail to use them, the fault is with us. Therefore, we do not condemn a system of representative government because some of the individuals who make up the government are unfit and unworthy of the rights they enjoy.

The bolsheviks appear to favor a change in the method of governing the people. The plan they have adopted is based on the theory that the people must not be trusted, but that the officeholders can. Bolshevism is government from the top down, rather than from the bottom up. They seem to go on the theory that power delegated through many hands will lose its corruption just as running water does. This political theory flies in the face of all human experience.

Bolshevik "Joker."

In our numbers we have a figure which for many years has enjoyed a peculiar reputation; it is the "jester" of numbers. It is the number "23." It is known in American slang as "skidoo." The bolsheviks inserted in the constitution a joker, and oddly enough they gave it the "skidoo" number, "23." It is found in Article 2 of the constitution:

"Being guided by the interest of the working class as a whole, the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic deprives all individuals and groups of all rights which could be utilized by them to the detriment of the socialist revolution."

Here is the big beware sign in the constitution. What does it mean; what fears must come into the minds of men and women in Russia when they read this paragraph? The constitution deprives every one, individually and collectively, of exercising any rights he or they may have which are opposed to bolshevism. Did tyranny ever impose a more arbitrary, autocratic rule? The paragraph concedes that individuals and groups have rights, and then commands the people not to dare use those rights. If their exercise might be detrimental to the Lenin-Trotsky government. The right to voice thoughts is sentenced to silence. Freedom of opinion is crushed. Who is to determine what rights, if exercised, might be detrimental to a socialist revolution? The meaning is plain as the command is stern. Fall in line with bolshevism or perish, it is the order. If you disagree with our plans and methods, "be seen but not heard."

I wonder what our good friends, the militant soap boxers, who shout about freedom of speech, would think and say if in these days of unrest the congress of the United States and the president should make such a pronouncement. America, radical and conservative, would rise in protest against any such law. We live, grow and progress as a people because of our freedom of thought, speech and action. Of course, we silence the man who criminally advocates lawlessness, and we do it for the same reason that we arrest the man who spits on the sidewalk. It is to conserve the public welfare, the common good of the great majority who do not believe in violence and disorder. What would happen to our "Red" agitators if they were in Russia today instead of in the United States, and ventured a single disagreement with the bolshevik program, either in policy or methods? This constitutional provision is not a muffer on free speech, it is a gag.

What freedom can there be in a country in which opinion is shackled? How can a nation make progress except by the conflict and friction of opinion? In the United States, experience has taught us that the majority is generally right, that the many can be trusted. We have put into practice the idea that many heads are better than one. The bolshevik constitution launches the policy that wisdom can only come from a few minds—the fewer, the better. This is the method they adopted to socialize freedom of thought, freedom of speech. It means a communism of ideas, but a very limited communism. In fact, limited to the "Holy Seventeen," and the oracledictator. The people are outside the circumference of this communism. In their zone communism commands obedience and silence. The human race has fought many a fine fight to take the fetters from the minds of men, and no fight was ever made for a more essential liberty. When the mind of man is not free, what freedom can there be? The jailing of the body, serious as it is, is only a small interference with man's liberty compared with the imprisonment of his mind.

This constitutional clamp muzzles the press. Notwithstanding all the criticism which may be justly made against the press, the fact remains that the newspapers of the world have been a great force for good, a great power in securing freedom. We see the world through the eyes of the newspapers; it is our source of information; we depend upon it for the facts upon which we base our opinions. Notwithstanding the bitter partisan character of the press, few papers know party lines or party prejudice when the public interest is menaced. The press has thrown the searchlight of terrible publicity on the ratholes and driven out the political rats. The freedom of the press is indispensable to free government.

Lenine's Change of Heart.

Lenine, before he came into power, was the londest voice in Russia, crying for free speech. His pen had been most bitter against interference with the freedom of the press. In his pamphlet, "Lessons of Revolution," he wrote:

"The printing establishments of the labor press are raided. The bolsheviks are arrested, not infrequently without accusation, or on the pretext of charges which are simply calumnious. 'It may be argued that the prosecution of the bolsheviks is by no means a violation of free speech, since only certain persons on specific charges are thus prosecuted. But such arguments bear the earmarks of premeditated untruth. For why should printing offices be raided, newspapers suppressed, for the crimes of individuals, even if these crimes are proven and sustained by law? It would be altogether different if the government declared criminal the entire bolshevik party, its ideas and views. But everyone knows 'that the government of free Russia never could, and indeed never attempted to do anything of the kind.'"

Lenine coming into power, wrote into the constitution a new crime. He declared all opposition to the bolshevik program a crime. On this high moral ground he struck down freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of opinion and freedom of the press.

In the language of a great radical, the time will come when the silence of the people of Russia will be more powerful than the voices throttled by the bolshevik gag today.

Message for Today.

By far the greater part of the suffering and crime which exist at this moment in civilized Europe arises simply from people not understanding this truism—not knowing that produce or wealth is eternally connected by the laws of heaven and earth with resource labor; but hoping in some way to cheat or abrogate this everlasting law of life, and to feel where they have not sown, and be warm where they have not woven. I repeat, nearly all our misery and crime result from this one misapprehension.—Ruskin.

French to Pay More for Bread.

Joseph J. B. E. Moutens, French minister of provisions, announced to the credit committee of the chamber of deputies that the government would advance the price of wheat to millers from 43 to 75 francs a metric hundred-weight and of flour to 91 francs, the government ceasing to absorb the difference in price. This will raise the price of a two-pound loaf of bread in Paris from 55 to 90 centimes and in the provinces from 60 centimes to 95 centimes.

The fellow with coal in his cellar will not feel nearly so uneasy about the contemplated coal miners' strike.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Look Young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Mu-Col Quickly Defeats Deadly Catarrh Germs

Says Mu-col Makes Miserable, Despondent Catarrh Sufferers Well Again in Short Time at Trifling Cost

Here is the only sure way to get rid of catarrh, with all its obnoxious symptoms:

Go to your druggist today and say "I want a small package of MU-COL." Dissolve half a teaspoonful in a teaspoonful of warm water and stir till dissolved. Then, by snuffing up from the palm of the hand or by using nasal douche or atomizer, allow the MU-COL solution to come into contact with the infected membranes.

Almost instantly you will feel the effect, as its penetrating, antiseptic properties are carried into every nook and crevice of the mucous membrane where the germs thrive and multiply, loosening up the congestion and accumulated secretions, which if not attended to now, will eventually threaten the existence of the membranes themselves. All good druggists can supply you.

WORLD'S BIGGEST WARSHIP FOR U. S. SCHWAB REVEALS

The United States will soon have the world's most powerful warship, Charles M. Schwab announced yesterday at the New York University Endowment Fund luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore. The huge vessel, for which plans are now being completed, will be a battle cruiser, capable of a speed ten knots an hour faster than the Lusitania, once Queen of the Seas, he declared.

The new vessel will be 1,000 feet long, 104 feet wide and of 60,000 tons displacement. It will carry twelve sixteen-inch guns and will cost about $50,000,000. Mr. Schwab said: "The building of enough of these ships will be a simple way of maintaining peace with the world. Not that the fighting men of the navy desire peace, but because of the fact that when we have such a formidable array of power it is not likely that any country will take it upon itself to encroach upon our rights."

THREE ANGLES

The death certificate read: Minnie Allison, aged twenty, tuberculosis.

When Minnie was a child, her mother had died from tuberculosis. At twenty, Minnie, apparently in splendid health, active in war work, caught a cold she could not shake off. She lost weight and strength. The night sweats and spitting of blood, forced her to the doctor, but it was too late.

Granny Brown had prophesied many years before, that the child would inherit the disease of the mother. But Granny Brown was wrong. Minnie Allison did not inherit the disease, but contracted it. And as most cases originate in childhood, it is probable that the seeds were planted as her tuberculous mother kissed her baby lips.

These seeds had remained lying, but quiet. When her resisting forces were weakened by the strain of driving work, the germs of tuberculosis multiplied and spread, and there was another victim of galloping consumption.

Six months later Charles Wilkins replied to a letter from his cousin.

B—ville, Pa. —10.

Dear Cousin:

Shortly after I received your letter telling of the death of Minnie Allison, I saw Miss Brown, the State Nurse. I mentioned, I had been losing weight, was short of breath and felt rotten. She said, "See a doctor." I did, and she said, "Perhaps tuberculosis." I almost collapsed. But the doctor went on: "Clear up, take it easy and protect in the air and sunshine and protect on the porch and feel the next day."

The laboratory report of what I coughed up (sputum) showed millions of germs. The doctor told me to cough into a paper cup, or paper handkerchief, to spit in a paper cup, some of which he gave me. The handkerchiefs and cups to be burned after use. I washed my hands frequently, using paper towels. I have my own dishes and table utensils, which should be boiled after each use, to avoid shaking hands or kissing, particularly in regard to children. Thus I would protect my life.

I am going to get well. I wrote George Jenkins at the Mont Alto Sanatorium, asking him about the place. I expect to go there.

Your cousin,
Charles Wilkins.

Several days later the reply came from George Jenkins.
State Sanatorium, Mont Alto, Pa. —10.

Dear Charles:

Sorry to learn old T. B. has his nut on you, but don't worry, he's not the "Champ" he used to be. When he scores a knockout, it's almost always the other fellow's fault.

There are a thousand of us here and every one with a smile. I had an idea that Mont Alto was as cheerful as a bartender's convention after the first of July, but I got another thing to think about when I pulled the trigger of my gun here. "Spunk," the magazine published by the patients, matches the spirit of the place.

There are two parts to the Sanatorium. The Hospital, where the best patients are, and the Cottages where I live.

The cottages have four rooms, each with two windows which are always open. We arise at six-thirty. At seven breakfast, then back to our cottages in tidy shape. After the doctor looks us over, we go to "cure." You wonder what that is. We sit in comfortable chairs in the open air pavilions and do things. They call it "occupational therapy." Don't know what that is? I didn't either the first time I heard it. I thought it was a disease.

It's this way. A fellow comes here, he thinks he's out, he's ailed and he can't work again and he's inclined to be homesick. So they give him something to do. He gets too busy thinking about what he's doing to worry about his illness. He gets used to getting worse while he waits, he gets well while he works, and that's "Occupational Therapy."

At 10:30 we get a mug of real 18-karat milk. Dinner at noon. This Mont Alto air, sifted through the pines, 1800 feet up, makes dinner worth while. After dinner, back to our cottages. Then those who have temperaments go to "cure." Milk at 2:30. Supper at five and walk at 7:30.

We have a community house where we have entertainments, motion pictures and all that sort of thing.

It doesn't cost a cent from the time you arrive, until you walk to the station agent and say "Gimme a ticket, home."

The doctor told me last week the disease was arrested. My Good news I'll say, but I'm in this fight until it's tried, found guilty and executed and then some, and when I go home you may count on me to stick to the program that pulled me through up here.

Your friend,
George Jenkins.

TROUTVILLE LOSES BY $30,000 FIRE

As a result of a fire that started in Troutville at 8:30 o'clock last evening and burned for several hours that village sustained a loss that is estimated at $30,000 partly covered by insurance. The only means of fighting fire in Troutville is by a bucket brigade and after the blaze had secured a start that threatened to sweep the main street, an alarm was sent into DuBois. A pumper responded and made the run in good time, but the fire was practically under control by that time. The pumper went into action, however, and relieved the bucket brigade. There was a high wind sweeping this high point and the fire twice crossed the street. The fact that there was a brick house in the path of the flames prevented further spread.

The fire started in the residence occupied by Hugh Best, the explosion of a lamp being the cause. This house was destroyed as was the home adjoining, occupied by Thomas Shugarts and obnerv by L. D. Weber, of DuBois. The flames then communicated to the J. H. Lott store across the street, burning this structure as well as the Lott home. The house owned and occupied by Henry Eargood next fell a victim to the flames.

The last home destroyed was that owned by H. J. London. A stable owned by G. J. Weber was also destroyed.

The fire was plainly seen from all over the country and there was a large gathering of people from all sections to assist in fighting the flames.

FARMER KILLED BY B. & P. TRAIN NEAR DUBOIS CITY

Theodore Lewis a well known farmer was instantly killed a short distance south of DuBois at 6:45 yesterday morning when he was struck by the locomotive of the B. & P. passenger train leaving Punxsutawney at 6 o'clock.

Lewis was driving a team of horses across the tracks near his farm. He was walking behind them and stood alongside the tracks while a freight train passed. He did not hear the approach of the passenger train and drove the team onto the tracks almost in front of the speeding passenger train. The horses crossed the tracks and were not injured but the pilot of the locomotive struck Lewis and hurled him from the tracks, killing him instantly.

The deceased, who was 63 years of age, was single, and the past 28 years had made his home with T. J. Wayne, of near DuBois.

The wall safes opened, the papers stolen, the pearls gone, the anonymous notes, the blackmail threats, the loss of your job, the voices you've heard. Now on this outer circle will mark down all the people who might be mixed up in these things—mind ye, I say only might be. First, there's Lefty Moore's woman—we know she's a crook. Then who do we know that knows her? There's at least two—Mr. Wick, the superintendent that hired her, and this Mr. Henry Kent, whose apartment she telephoned to. They there's all the rest of the help in the house. Any one of them might be her pal. Then there's the flighty Bradford girl—

"You don't suspect her, do you?" I cried, horrified at the prospect of his investigation taking this turn.

"Be easy," he retorted. "I'm not suspecting anyone. I'm only putting them down. There's the Bradford girl and her ex-husband. He's a big snail and that makes him a crook. Those two men you saw in the park, one of them with a scar on his face—we'll run them down. You know a cafe the scar-faced man goes to, so that's a start. There's the man who shadowed you—would you know him again if you saw him?"

I shook my head doubtfully.

"I'm afraid not," I admitted, "you see—"

"Don't bother to explain. You either would or wouldn't, and that's all we need to know now. There's old Mr. Gaston and his wife. It's queer about their ducking out so suddenly and leaving no address, but maybe they're only scared. Let's see who else is there—the Bradford servants and the old man's, the old washwoman—and the families who live in the house. We've got the circle pretty well covered, haven't we?"

More and more I had begun to appreciate how valuable the services of an experienced detective would be likely to be in helping to solve the mystery.

"Look here, Gorman," I said, "why can't you take charge of this case for us?"

"What's in it?" he asked.

My face fell, and my enthusiasm died a sudden death. Once more I was confronted by the specter of my poverty. Of what use my talking to a high-priced investigator like Gorman when all the money I had in the world was less than two hundred dollars, out of which I had to live until I found employment. Yet I must serve Barbara Bradford.

"If you clear up this case," I announced, "I'll give you every cent I've got in the world."

He shook his head.

"It ain't enough. If I take this case, it won't be for the money that's in it. For that matter I can get all I want from old Gaston for getting his pearls back. That'll be enough."

"Then you will take the case," I cried jubilantly.

"On one condition. That you'll promise to keep everything away from the police."

"I promise that for myself and Miss Bradford, too. That was the one reason she advanced against my telling you about things. She was afraid you'd call in the police."

"Never fear about that. There's nothing I'd like better than to put it over that bunch of young reformers they've got down in Center street. This hotel work don't suit me, anyhow. I've been thinking of opening up an office of my own. The recovery of the Gaston pearls would be a nice feather in my cap to start with."

"I see," I replied, "but you'll need money for expenses and that sort of thing, won't you? I have—"

"Leave that part of it to me," he retorted with a quizzical smile. "After all the years I was on the police force I ain't exactly broke by a long shot. All you've got to do is to keep your eyes open and let me know all that goes on in the apartment house. I'll attend to the rest. Don't do anything, though, without consulting me first."

"I'll gladly promise that."

"Good enough. We'd better arrange then to meet here every day at three sharp. It's as good a place as any."

"I'll be here."

"And look out you're not trailed. They may try shadowing you again."

"Who do you mean by they?" I asked eagerly.

"Them that trailed you yesterday," replied Gorman with a grin. "If you don't know, I don't know either—yet."

From his manner I was confident that he already had a shrewd suspicion as to the identity of some of the persecutors. The maze in the center of which he had placed Miss Bradford and myself meant far more to him, undoubtedly, than it did to me. More than likely his vast knowledge of the methods of criminals and his acquaintance with others like Lefty Moore

NEW TASTELESS CASTOR OIL IS EASY TO TAKE

Strength and Purity Remain the Same, but All Unpleasant Taste Is Removed.

A remarkable process, perfected by the chemists of Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., has resulted in great improvement in castor oil, the old family remedy. This new TASTELESS CASTOR OIL has the same strength and purity as the old-fashioned kind. Nothing has been removed but the taste. KELLOGG'S TASTELESS CASTOR OIL is precisely what the name says—ABSOLUTELY TASTELESS. Think what this means to mothers and children. When the doctor says, "Give them castor oil," there need no longer be any trouble. Children need never know they are taking castor oil. Grown-ups will also appreciate the difference between KELLOGG'S TASTELESS CASTOR OIL and the old-fashioned nauseating kind. Insist on Kellogg's if you want a REALLY tasteless castor oil. At all good druggists. Two sizes, 32c and 65c. (Adv.)

BIG CIRCUS CARRIES SOME HOTEL

The "cook tent" is one of the marvels of the modern circus. It was the custom for many years for the management to send its employees to the local "city" hotels for their food. The undertaking for providing the meals for the army on the grounds was so stupendous that the best regulated hotels were unable to take the load. Finally, the objections to the old method made the accomplishment necessary. As the circus grew in size the combined efforts of hotels and restaurants were unable to meet the demand, thrust upon them.

B. E. Wallace was the first man to carry a complete commissary department with his army, and later other shows followed in pursuit. Advanced men now see that all needs of the commissary department are supplied meat, vegetables, and the other requirements await the hands of a dozen chefs. There are two separate and distinct culinary departments with the Huguenock-Wallace circus, which comes to Clearfield, Tuesday, May 25, for performances at 2 and 8 p. m.

Those whose stomachs are not satisfied until the tents are raised and all the paraphernalia is on the lot. This is a wise idea, which insures prompt and handy work.

Under a nearby canvas are fed the executive staff, performers, men, women and children of the circus. There are neat tables, table cloths and china dishes. There is a bill of fare and one may find anything that is supplied in the dining room of the best metropolitan hotel. The food is cooked in the open and it has its own peculiar appetizing flavor. It is served in abundance, and a happier, heartier body never did more justice to a meal. Skillful waiters, neatly attired in white, do prompt attendance. As the "cook tent" are the first to be raised in the morning, they are necessarily the first to be packed away on the "flying squadron" at night, that breakfast may be served at 7 o'clock the following day in a town probably a hundred miles away, in another state.

For Matrons—Brilliant Hats

MODISTES and costumers may make clothes in greater variety and quantity for young women than for matrons, but it is the matron's outfitting that gives them most concern. In the province of millinery the designing of matrons' hats is of such importance that gifted men and women give all their time to it. In the group shown here four semi-dress hats are pictured.

The hat at the top of the group is a spirited shape of brilliant black straw that recalls the Napoleon. The high tuster of the braid and the flues in the shape, are both contributors to the smart style of this model, which is less trimmed than any of its companions. It has an ornament made of long glycerined ostrich flues and celadon foliage.

The handsome turban of black moire ribbon and a jet ornament at the left of the group is a Russian inspiration in which very rich ribbon is very cleverly draped over a frame. This is a handsome hat, with plenty of character that might be made in any rich color or in black. Facing it a faint lar straw shape is almost covered with very large, flat silk blossoms partly veiled with malines; those on top of the crown give it additional height. A shape of string-colored braid with blue or American Beauty shades in the trimming would be handsome, the malines in the same color as the hat; or the flowers might be in several colors.

The last hat is built on a shape of luscious blond, which may be imagined in dark blue or brown or black, with a very high drapery of "hairnet" cloth, veiling a few handsome roses in natural shades. A collar of ribbon with bow at the left side, completes an ideal of becoming smartness in matrons' hats. This hair-net cloth is a novelty in millinery materials that is specially well suited to hats for older women.

QUALITY!

We believe that a store like this owes something to the public beyond the mere gathering and selling of merchandise—that it has no business selling poor goods, no matter whether the buyer has discerning judgment or not.

We believe it is the duty of a store to make sure its goods are worthy before they reach its counters, and that they answer every test of excellence and trustworthiness to which a strict business policy subjects them. Perhaps in all the years that we have been in business we have carried this policy to the extreme by measuring every article we sell by the severe test of QUALITY. Quality is the guiding spirit of this store. Quality first, quality last, quality at all times. Quality is the keynote of our stocks—that honest, dependable quality that carries with it the assurance of lasting satisfaction. If we elect to speak of QUALITY FIRST, it is simply because quality is the chief manifestation of economy and value.

What does quality mean to YOU when goods are talked of? Quality! Quality of materials and of making. Quality in the raw materials, quality in the finished goods, quality in the designs, quality in the styles, quality so uniform and complete, that fabrics, designs and workmanship appear to be the perfection of a single process rather than the miracle of many.

These things are carried to the extreme here. Our selections are made with the greatest care. We search below the surface, looking for weaknesses and defects. We discard every article that we believe would in any way prove unworthy, when placed to the test of actual use.

We know that our care is appreciated by our friends—the buying public. We know that people everywhere have learned that buying here is safe; that they can depend on whatever comes from this store; and that our standard of quality means something. Where quality is, satisfaction is, and that is the place to spend your money. And while we do not wish to dismiss the question of price lightly—for prices here are always consistent with the qualities offered—yet we wish to emphasize that our last word, as well as the first, on goods purchased here must be QUALITY.

A. W. LEONARDSON & CO.

IT'S AN ECONOMY TO DO ALL YOUR BUYING IN A STORE WHERE ONE PRICE IS THE RULE

It's a fact that stores where two prices for the same goods is the rule have a greater expense than the one price store—for when a sale is made in a store of this kind the customer must be sold twice—once on quality and once on price—all of which takes extra time—extra time means extra clerks—extra clerks means greater prices to the customer. So while a two price store will break the first price asked you may sure that you pay more than you should in the end.

How different in a store like this where the one price system is the rule—here we mark our goods at a fair profit—and we can do it because here a customer is sold only once—either on price or quality, which eliminates the extra expense that means extra costs to you, this method allows a quicker outlet for goods which means an additional reduction in costs, and last but not least you never leave this store with the suspicion that perhaps after all you have been imposed upon in your purchase. Think it over, we are sure that you will realize the wisdom of shopping here where the one price system is the rule and our Money Back Guarantee goes with each sale.

Short Story About Shellac

Shellac is the joint product of insects and plants and comes from India. The lac insects are about 1.25 of an inch long, a bright red in color. They suck the juices of plants, digest them and exude them in the form of resin, which soon encases the whole insect. When the young insects have swarmed out, the resin is scraped from the branches, ground, washed, mixed with colophony and ornament, cooked slowly and drawn out into the thin sheets we know as shellac.

AN INTERVIEW WITH "A. W."

It is not every store that has built up such a large volume of business as the store of A. W. Leonardson Company.

Fifteen years ago, or to be exact, in May, 1905, A. W. Leonardson and F. G. Lindholm came to this city and purchased what was then the H. A. Kratzer store. From its very inception the firm made a reputation for fair dealing and this reputation grew not only in this city, but went to every hamlet and town within a trading radius of Clearfield.

By mutual consent the firm of Lindholm & Leonardson was dissolved in July 31, 1905, and has continued under the present name and present management.

In an interview with the Progress man upon the subject Mr. Leonardson said: "When I started this business I made it my aim to fully satisfy my customers, as a satisfied customer is a merchant's best asset."

I made up my mind that any person who made a purchase in this store and was not fully satisfied with the price and quality after they had inspected the purchase in their own home, I would make it an infallible rule that the purchase price should be returned without a question.

That this policy was popular was shown by the ever increasing trade that came to this store. Another policy I kept in mind from the time I planned to go into business, would give the best possible values for the money that could be given, and our keynote should be service.

I have always endeavored to train my salespeople to know as much about their wares as I did; that they could answer all sorts of questions about the uses and origin of the goods or material.

To show the finest grade of merchandise, and to show it first, was another of the thoughts that I had even before this store was opened, and will always be the paramount idea with every buyer in the store."

Mr. Leonardson then went on to

A Plain Statement of Fact

We are among the thousands of merchants throughout the nation who are helping to break the backbone of high prices. Therefore we have decided to give our customers for 9 days only a discount of from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. on almost everything in the store.

It is impossible for us to give a discount of 20 per cent. on everything in the store as all of our merchandise is marked at a very close margin of profit.

We advise you to supply your needs in this sale for many months to come.

WE STUDY TO PLEASE OUR CUSTOMERS BRANCHES IN EUROPE OUR BUYERS' PLAN

"To study hard, to think quietly, to act frankly, talk gently"—that was the creed of a noble man. And this store profits by those words of wisdom, for it believes that it is never too late nor are we ever too old to learn.

We study to please with service, showing the new things while they are yet new, having the variety that lends zest to the customer's choice, and prices that will be fair to us both. If we do not "act frankly" you will find us out, and unless we talk courteously—call it "gently" if you will—then we weaken in self-respect because it is the "worst wheel on the cart that makes the most noise." We study to please.

A Native Acacia

Southern California boasts one native species of acacia, the cat's claw (a Grevia), which is but a shrub in that state, but becomes a tree in Arizona. It bears small pale yellow flowers and an abundance of very sharp thorns.

tell how the store was started at Kane, Pa., in 1903, and then stores in DuBois, Warren and Meadville following in close succession. The same broad business policies prevail in all these stores and, taken as a whole, they are the finest bunch of stores of their kind in Western Pennsylvania.

Resident Buyers Firm to Establish Permanent Offices in Europe

Kirby, Block & Fischer, resident buyers, are planning to establish permanent branch offices in the important trade centers of Europe, and perhaps in the Orient also. For this purpose John Block, of the firm, will go abroad in a few months.

Joseph Fischer, of the firm, now is on La France on his way to Europe. He intends to get first-hand information of merchandise and freight conditions abroad, and will travel in France, England, Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Although his trip is primarily to get information, he will purchase select articles and fancy goods if he finds prices favorable. He has been a buyer of toilet articles and fancy goods for twenty years, beginning his career in 1900 with The Dry Goods Union.

Aaron B. C. Kirby will sail after the other members of the firm return and will make purchases of silk and cotton yarn goods for 1921 delivery.

"Poor Richard."

Poor Richard was the "pen name," the name assumed by Benjamin Franklin in a series of almanacs published from 1732 to 1757. These almanacs contain maxims and precepts on temperance, economy, cleanliness, chastity and other homely virtues, and to several of the maxims are added the words, "As Poor Richard says."

Formation of Asbestos.

Asbestos is found in fissures of rock and it is believed that, when the rock was forming and still hot, water penetrated the fissures, widened them and dissolved some of the silica and magnesia. On drying, these crystallized as a hydrated silicate of magnesia, forming threadlike crystals building up from opposite walls of the fissure and meeting in the middle.

Wasn't Quite Ready for Ride.

As the farm where we stayed last summer was out of the beaten track of automobiles, Bobby was both curious and afraid of our car when we came there. At first nothing would induce him to take a ride in it. After one of our uncles to just sit in it, he drew his seven-year-old sister (who certainly was not afraid of the car) down to him and whispered in a most serious manner: "Tell those people when I get older and tamer I'll ride with them."

Elements' Gifts to the Deity.

There is an old myth that recounts the offering made by the elements as gifts to the deity. The air gave a rainbow, fire a meteor, the earth a ruby and the sea a pearl. The rainbow made a halo around the god. The meteor served as a lamp. The ruby decorated his forehead and the pearl was worn upon his heart.

Microbes With a Double Life.

The transformation of microbes from one form to another has been described by many investigators, and it has even been suggested that the same microbe in different forms may be responsible for different diseases.

Don't Overlook Little Things.

The young fellow who thinks that little things are not worth bothering about stands a slim chance of ever having any big things to look after. Big things grow from little things. The tallest oak was once an acorn.

Taffetas for Summer Wear

THERE are so many pretty taffeta dresses this season, made up in so many ways, that it seems almost an entire wardrobe might be assembled from among them, if all other fabrics were barred. Then, to add to their diversity, designers have hit upon combinations of taffeta and organza, taffeta and net, and taffeta and lace.

An example of original and beautiful designing, the dress at the left of the two shown above will interest every lover of taffeta. Its bodice is cut on kimono lines, but departs from them with a wide flare in elbow sleeves and its fascinating at the back. It has a round neck and extends six or eight inches below the waistline. The skirt at the front forms a panel extending a little way above the waist and merging into the bodice in a "Y"-shaped opening outlined with embroidery in silk. In the back it terminates at the waist line.

The bodice forms a narrow yoke at each side over the hips and the skirt is fastened to the yoke in a series of pencil folds, bordered with a narrow band of silk in a lighter shade than the frock. This light silk faces the sleeves that are turned back to reveal it and gathered under a small disk of embroidery above the facing. An unexpected detail in the management of this frock is the flared skirt gathering at the bottom.

Another pretty taffeta, shown at the right, is made on more familiar lines but contrives to be just as pleasing as its rival. Its bodice with turned-back elbow sleeves has a group of small tucks at each side and a soft girdle that fastens under one large ornament at the right side. Narrow frills of the taffeta, set on in bands at the front and back and across the hips at the side, make a charming trimming. A frill of lace about the round neck provides a youthful neck dress. Necks in this style invite the use of beautiful old lace collars shaped to fit them and already they have made their appearance.

Millwood Birds.

The millwood birds are concealed in a pod, which breaks open and exposes them to the wind. Up they go through the air, each seed carried by a ball of silken down, the threads so frail that you are astonished when you examine them with a microscope. Each thread turns out to be a separate tube clothed with dark cotton-like streaks arranged in an irregular manner. When a millwood pod bursts open, you can imagine yourself in a miniature bird nest, in which scores of white craft soar up into the morning wind.

Beaver's Habits Fixed.

A careful study of beaver indicates that their acts, habits and customs are all instinctive, having in no way improved or advanced their original customs since the discovery of the species. They build their dams and lodges, provide their food supply and pursue the same course as they did thousands of years ago.

Isle of Napoleon's Exile.

False conceptions prevail of St. Helena, where Napoleon lived and died after his defeat and humiliation at Waterloo. It is credited with being a most ugly island. Exactly the opposite is the case. Not only is it not a rock, but a very beautiful, well-wooded and well-watered island, and also, on the whole, if one had to choose the most perfect climate existing anywhere in this world, the prize would have to go to St. Helena, and especially that part in which Longwood (Napoleon's residence) is situated.

Proof of a Proverb.

Clothes do not make the man. If they did there would be many more good men.—Buffalo Enquirer.

Origin of "Pitched Battle."

"A pitched battle" originated in the days of knight-errantry and was called then because boiling pitch was used by the defenders of a feudal castle to repel the attacking force. The battles, which usually took place outside the castle walls, would soon end when the boiling pitch began to flow from a tank on top of the walls. This originated the term "a pitched battle."

Some Whispering!

According to an ancient Irish superstition, a vicious horse could be tamed by whispering the creed in its right ear Fridays and in its left ear on Wednesdays till it was cured, which was merely a matter of time, unless it had been born at Whitsonville, in which case it was incurable.

LEONARDSON'S FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY SECTION

Simplicity for Younger Girls

IN DRESSING the miss from six to sixteen almost everyone agrees that she looks her best in simple frocks. Simplicity is the foundation of styles as they are created for her by people who give their talent and time to a task that is a long way from easy. Two white frocks for girls from twelve to sixteen years, the efforts of experts, are shown here for the benefit of mothers who must settle the matter of dresses for graduation day and other days. These models can be made up in any of the lovely colors in organdy or voile.

This frock is made with plain blouse and straight, moderately full skirt. Instead of tucks, there are wide bands about both the blouse and skirt set on the underside and hem stitched to place. A color might be used in these bands but there is an advantage in all white, since it can be worn over colored underslips as well as over white, and two or three slips provided for the same dress. The waist has a round neck finished with a deep full of voile and narrower fulls make the turned back cuffs. The pretty be-horn hat, trimmed with small flowers suits the dress exactly.

One of many organdy dresses designed for the younger graduates, has a bodice with deep "V" neck introducing a small chemise of tucked organdy, and a wide plain collar. There are elbow sleeves with turned back cuffs. Plain and tucked organdy make the skirt, the tucked side panels having groups of seven narrow tucks at wide intervals across them. Small, round button fasteners are placed on the skirt where the tucks are joined to the plain front and back panels and a very small side drape in the skirt is allowed as a concession to sixteen years and the dignity and importance of graduation day.

Julia Bottomly

Grease Spots.
When grease is spilled on a hardwood floor it can be hardened and scraped off if cold water is poured on. If it is not detected immediately, cover the grease spot with starch or powdered chalk, which will absorb most of the grease. It can then be washed off with hot soapsuds.

Big Dish for Birds.
Hundreds of embryo caterpillars are destroyed at a single swallow by the nuthatches and chickadees hunting about the birches during winter, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington, and even the crows have been known to eat the little varnished pellets of eggs.

BREAD BAKED IN DIFFERENT WAYS

Whatever Method Is Used Resulting Loaf Should Be Appetizing and Wholesome.

LARGEST SINGLE FOOD ITEM

Some of Points Which Cause Failure Are Wrong Selection of Materials and Utensils—Essentials Are Urged by Specialists.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Bread is the largest single item of food in the diet of the great majority of people, and of the staple foods probably no other can be so easily spoiled in the preparation. Some women, after a few failures in bread making, give up the attempt and buy their bread. Very many of us are partial to home made loaf. In many localities it is necessary to bake bread at home, in others it is a convenience, and in very many it is done from choice. It is not difficult to make good bread, and it is worth while to learn to do so.

Some of the points which cause failure in bread making are the wrong choice of materials and utensils, lack of absolute cleanliness, carelessness in measuring the ingredients, poor methods of mixing and molding and improper care of the dough while it is rising, also wrong care of the loaf while it is baking, or wrong care of the loaves after they are taken from the oven.

The necessary materials for bread making are flour, water, salt, and yeast. The materials occasionally used are milk, sugar, and fat. Good wheat bread can be made by a number of processes. Three recommended by the United States department of agriculture food specialists follow:

Short or Straight-Dough Process.
2 cups lukewarm $\frac{1}{2}$ cup liquid yeast
milk, water or $\frac{1}{2}$ 2 tablespoons salt
mixture of the two 2 tablespoons sugar
1 cake compressed yeast if used 2 tablespoons or 1 spoon or less $\frac{1}{2}$ cups lukewarm 6 cups or 3 pints milk, water or sifted flour
mixture of the two

Original bulk of dough, 1 quart;
bulk when ready to be made into loaves, $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 quarts. This will make 2 loaves.

Boil the water or scald the milk.
Put the sugar and salt (and fat, if used) into a mixing bowl. Pour the hot liquid over it and allow it to become lukewarm. Mix the yeast with a little of the lukewarm liquid and add it to the rest of the liquid. If convenient, set this aside in a warm
place, not over 80 degrees Fahrenheit,
for 1 hour; if not convenient to
set it aside add the flour at once
putting in a little at a time and knead

ing until the dough is of such consistency that it sticks neither to the bowl nor to the hands. This requires

After the Baking Place Bread on a Rack in a Clean Place Where the Wind Can Blow on It.

about 10 minutes. Cover, and allow to rise 1 1/2 hours at a temperature of 80 degrees; it may be better to set it
at a lower temperature, but the lower
the temperature the longer the time required for the rising.

Cut down the dough from the sides
of the bowl, raise the hands slightly.
Knead a little and set aside to rise
again for 1 hour. With a good bread flour, the dough should triple its bulk
in each rising. With a soft wheat flour it should not rise much beyond
twice its volume. Divide into portions,
mold and place in greased pans of standard size (1 1/2 quarts). Allow to rise until a light touch will make a slight dent. With good bread flour
this happens when the dough reaches the top of the pans. Bake 30 minutes
in a medium hot oven.

Overnight Sponge Method.
Use the same proportions as for the short process, except in the case of the yeast, which should be one eighth cake of compressed yeast or 2 table-
spoonsful of liquid yeast for each loaf.
Use water rather than milk. In the evening mix the yeast with water, salt,
and half of the flour, and beat thoroughly. Cover and place at a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit, or that of an ordinary room. In the morning add the sugar and the rest of the flour and proceed as in the case
of the short process.

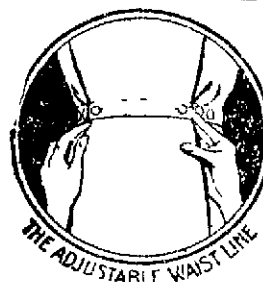

Harmony Above All.
A garden should not be considered
as a piece of wild nature, nor plants
regarded as architectural ornaments,
for the must not do violence to the other. Above all must there be harmony. Otherwise the builder has built a ruin. For this reason a garden that is a success is a representation of the harmony of nature.

BARMON WASHABLE DRESSES

FOR HOME, FOR PORCH AND FOR STREET WEAR

The Four Famous Features

The FOUR FAMOUS FEATURES

By buttoning two buttons, the waistline on the Adjustable models can be altered in a way that permits the dress to overcome any irregularity of proportions and fit the figure perfectly at every point.

Merely pulling a thread lengthens the skirt to any of these dresses. No ripping or re-stitching of seams necessary to make this alteration. No other dresses have this unique feature.

CONVENTION MEETS IN CHICAGO

SPROUL-WOOD ALLIANCE BOTHERS

NEW YORK, May 18—The biggest event in pre-convention campaigns was transpiring in Pennsylvania or it wasn't. It depended upon your sources of information.

According to one story Senator Boise Penrose's domination of the state Republican organization and incidentally his influence in national politics was in the balance. The Senator's friends, however, contend that whatever action is taken by the Pennsylvania Republicans in the primaries today would only strengthen Penrose's position. The situation appeared to be so involved that only the events at the Chicago convention will furnish a solution.

An alliance between Wood and Governor Wm. G. Sproul was effected some time ago whereby the governor was to the first choice of the 76 delegates and Wood the second choice. Just one-half of the regular organization delegates were on this program.

In the case of the other half they preferred to take their instructions from Penrose. Governor Sproul's forces put up a rival slate to oppose these 38 delegates. There is no enmity between Penrose and Sproul and no contest to decide the superiority in Pennsylvania. Penrose put Knox forward in good faith as a strong compromise candidate who could compose both wings of the Republican party. The organization slate has not been "tampered" with.

VIRTUAL STATE OF WAR EXISTS IN
IRELAND: ADDITIONAL TROOPS USED

LONDON, May 18—A crisis in northwest and southern Ireland apparently is developing rapidly. Indications were that General MacReady had begun his long expected campaign to restore order on the island. Thousands of fresh troops were being distributed in the west and south, dispatches said. At the same time the government was reported ready to adopt drastic measures in Londonderry. A large body of troops arrived in Londonderry last night following three nights of rioting between Unionists and Sinn Feiners. Soldiers were thrown around the disorderly areas. Citizens remained on the streets all night.

"Existence of a state of war" was beginning to be realized by everybody in Ireland. In some quarters proclamation of martial law was expected.

SHEA: MEN WILL AWAIT AWARD

CHICAGO, May 18—That the possibility of a railroad strike has been averted as a result of the railroad owners willingness to grant wage increases for their employees was expressed here by railroad union executives. Union leaders said the question now is how much of an increase the Railroad Labor Board is willing to grant. They believe the public will suffer for the increase in the shape of increased traffic rates. "The situation is much relieved," according to Timothy Shea, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen. "It means that the possibility of a strike has been lessened and that the nation has been greatly relieved," he said.

JOHN D. JR. DINES HUMBLBY

NEW YORK, May 18—Managers of Broadway restaurants were struck dumb when the news that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had eaten in an automatic restaurant was broken to them. Rockefeller following a meeting of the Inter-church movement managers went to dinner in an automat restaurant with a group of preachers.

TONY CHERILLO
FOUND GUILTY
BY JURYCelebrated Pelican Insurance
Case Now Occupies Attention
of Criminal Courts

HAIR PULLINGS SPLIT 50-50

Tony Cherillo, the Morrisdale man, who murderously assaulted Game Protectors Kelly and Davis when they went to search his brother Mike's home for guns, some two or three weeks ago, was convicted in criminal court yesterday of assault with intent to murder.

Cherillo attacked the officers with two knives, and seriously stabbed James Protector Davis before he was finally arrested. The defense set up a plea of insanity, but were unable to satisfy the jury that Cherillo was not fully accountable for his actions.

The case of Com. vs. M. J. Bennett, the noted Pelican Insurance company case was taken up this morning and will likely last a couple of days. The jury panel was exhausted in the attempt to secure a jury and Sheriff Gorman was compelled to summon several talesmen.

The Commonwealth is represented by District Attorney Arnold and Miller & Hartwick, while A. M. Liveright and A. R. Chase, Esq., are looking after Bennett's interest.

This case grows out of the operations of representatives of the Pelican Insurance company, a Philadelphia concern, in several sections of Clearfield county and several other counties in this region. It is alleged that the solicitors of the company sold life insurance on a health policy and cut up other diabolical contrivances to the statutes of Pennsylvania and the insurance laws of the state.

A double assault and battery case in which four women were the principals was declared a draw by the jury. Margaret Price prosecuted Carrie Cole while Margaret Beck was prosecutor in the case against Eva Cole. The verdict in each case was not guilty and prosecutrix and defendant each to pay one-half the costs.

CRISISReturn of the Roads To Virtual
Government Control Thought
To Be Only Solution

GOVERNMENT SLOW TO ACT

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Three separate government agencies today grappled with the railroad car shortage problem, endeavoring to avert serious impairment of the financial and industrial structure of the nation. The developments were:

1.—The Federal reserve board called a meeting to discuss what federal reserve banks can do in helping with the financial situation.

2.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission rushed to completion plans for drastic centralization of railroad control.

3.—Senate committee on appropriations and inter-state committee met with railroad executives to get first hand knowledge of car shortage situation.

With both the legislative and administrative branches of the government aroused to the vital need of action to keep the nation's transportation open to prevent a critical situation, the Inter-State Commerce Commission is expected within the next 24 hours to announce what practically will be re-establishment of government control of railroads.

Reports received by the Commission today from every section of the country confirmed the existence of an admittedly grave danger to industry and agriculture unless food and fuel supplies and the industrial output are made to move with far greater speed.

It is now universally admitted by government officials that the only method of effecting relief is to increase the efficiency of railroad management by co-ordination of control. The railway executives here state that they will agree to almost any measure, however drastic, that the commission decides necessary to place into effect.

The first step to be taken when the commission has completed its course of action will be throw all the railroad equipment of the country into a gigantic pool, for the joint use of all the carriers. Shipments of necessities of life will be given preference over all traffic moving on the railroads and over even passenger traffic if necessary. This important move has practically been agreed to already by the railroads it is understood.

Valuable crops of foodstuff rotting in the fields; raw materials for industry held up at their sources with the possibility of extensive layoffs of labor; the coal output dangerously reduced; these are only three angles of the enormous problem confronting the country today as a result of the car shortage, according to the conservative view of officials who are in a too close contact with the situation to spread alarmist reports.

A report issued today by the geological survey showed that the partial paralysis in the transportation situation had resulted in coal production for industrial purposes reaching a low ebb. In some instances the effect of the transportation disability amount to reduction in output at the mines as much as 60 per cent during the past week. If this situation is not immediately remedied officials fear a coal famine will be added to the list of industrial problems and yardmen's strike on some of the principal railroads serves further to aggravate the situation. Although this strike apparently is at an end, reports received within the last few days indicate that many of the men have not returned to work. This serves greatly to hamper the movement of freight through railroad junctions from Kansas City and St. Louis to eastern cities.

Lloyd Owens spent the week end with friends in Curwensville.

"Dads" Hear Reports On Many Phases
Of Borough Business of Interest To
Our Taxpayers Generally

PASS NEW FIRE ZONE ORDINANCE

The regular session of Town Council held in the Borough building last evening was a very busy session and much business of interest to the taxpayers generally was transacted. President Fletcher presided at the meeting and seven members were present.

Street Commissioner Graham reported the general activities of the street crew and showed a great deal of repair work was being done throughout the town.

Borough Engineer Hess reported on sidewalk grades on McBride, Eighth, Linden and Witmer streets and progress of Leavy avenue drain. He also stated that Third street repaving was about in shape for starting.

Chairman Rosser of the Highway Department stated that the work of paving the alley alongside the borough buildings had been started and that they expected to begin work of building concrete curbs and gutters on Third street by Wednesday or Thursday.

Mr. Rosser also presented estimates of cost of proposed paving of Gulich avenue and South Fourth street, as prepared by Borough Engineer Hess. According to Borough Engineer's figures the paving of Gulich avenue would cost approximately $4,300. The street to be paved is 680 feet long with a driveway 19 feet in width or a total of 1300 square yards.

South Fourth street is 1500 feet in length and the proposed paving 22 feet in width or a total of 3300 square yards and could be paved at an estimated cost of $17,500.

Further action on these improvements was deferred for the present.

Borough Solicitor Urey reported that he had attended the Bell Telephone rate raise hearing at Harrisburg May 5th and outlined what had been done by the more than one hundred attorneys present representing protestants against the raise. The Solicitor said an association had been formed by the attorneys and five representatives selected to look after the interests of same before the Public Service Commission at subsequent meetings. This association decided that a fund of $25,000 would be necessary to conduct the people's case. Clearfield's share of this fund was fixed at $125. Mr. Urey recommended that this sum be raised by popular subscription inasmuch as the principal increase in Bell rates was on the tolls and affected but a small part of our community. The matter was referred to Burgess Chase for his action on the same.

The ordinance providing for the laying of the millage for 1920 was presented and read to council. The millage was fixed as follows:

General Boro fund	9 mills
Light and water fund	2 1/2 mills
Borough bond fund	6 1/4 mills
Total	17 1/4 mills

This is an increase of 2 1/4 mills over 1919 but was made absolutely necessary by increasing costs of labor and materials of all kinds. One mill was added to the bond fund to care for the Third street paving proposition; one and one-quarter mill was added to the General Borough fund to take care of increased cost and one-half mill was added to the Light and Water fund to take care of the advance necessary to increase in installation of new lights throughout the borough.

The Ordinance providing for the construction of concrete curbs and gutters on Third street was also unanimously passed.

An ordinance prescribing new fire zone limits was also presented and unanimously adopted. The ordinance was prepared at the request of Fire Chief Knepp. The ordinance is a highly important one and provides in part as follows:

Prescribing the limits wherein non-combustible buildings of non-combustible material and fire-proof roofs shall be erected, reconstructed or placed, providing penalties for violation of the same and declaring any buildings erected, reconstructed or placed contrary to the provisions of this ordinance to be a public nuisance and abatable as such.

Be it ordained by the Council of the Borough of Clearfield in Council regularly assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by authority of the same.

Section 1. That none but buildings of non-combustible material and fire-proof roofs shall be erected, reconstructed or placed on that part of the borough of Clearfield bounded on the South by Walnut street, on the East by Fourth street, on the North by Bridge street, and on the West by the Susquehanna river, nor within a distance of 100 feet from either side of that part of Bigler avenue extending from Bridge street to Daisy street, nor within a distance of 150 feet from either side of Daisy street, nor within a distance of 150 feet from either side of that part of Nichols street extending from the Susquehanna river to Turnpike avenue.

Section 2. That no roofs of combustible material shall be reconstructed or replaced upon any structure within the above described limits.

Section 3. Any building erected, reconstructed or placed, or any roof reconstructed or replaced contrary to the provisions of this ordinance is hereby declared to be a public nuisance and abatable as such, and any person or persons, firm or corporation, either as principal or agent, violating any portion of this ordinance shall, upon conviction before the burgess or a Justice of the Peace be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than ten dollars per day for each day during which the ordinance is violated, and in default of the payment thereof, with costs, shall undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed thirty days.

Section 4. The council may issue temporary permits, revocable at any time by motion of council, for the building of temporary wooden structures or outhouses within the above described limits, provided plans are first submitted to and approved by the council.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed. Ordained and enacted this seventeenth day of May, A. D. 1920.

AMERICAN LEGION
PUTTING ON BIG
MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The American Legion has set apart the week of May 17-24 for membership drive week and an earnest effort is being made to enroll all former service men in this worthy organization.

John Shade Post of Clearfield now has a membership of something over 250 and as there are more than twice that number of young men in this section eligible to membership in the Legion a determined effort will be made this week to round up as many as possible for the purpose of increasing the rolls of the local Post.

The American Legion is doing a great work for former service men and the advantages of membership therein will be more and more apparent as the years go by. Now is the time to join and all eligibles should not hesitate to do so.

Joe Johnson and Frank Jette of Philipsburg spent yesterday with friends here.

Misses Sidney McGregor and Alveda Walizer of Lock Haven are visiting their sister and aunt Mrs. George Jacobs on 12th street.

Miss Grace Butler has returned from spending the week-end in Altoona.

Mr. Dickerman of New York, president of the Travel and Hotel Co., is transacting business in town.

Mrs. Lewis Matern and two children have returned from four weeks' visit in Johnstown.

BOLSHEVIKS FETTER LIBERTY

Theories Leaders of the Movement Lay Down and Put into Practice, Fly in the Face of All Human Experience.

Article XXIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

All the world except the bolshevik rulers of Russia is old-fashioned—hating the times. We still cling to the old superstition that the people should be the sovereigns, that public officials are public servants, that the safest plan of government is that form of government which is nearest to the people. In the United States each citizen has one vote. He has a vote for the men who make the local laws, the city or village ordinances; a vote for the men who enforce the ordinances, the mayor; a vote for the representatives in the state legislature, where the laws are made; for the governor, who enforces the state laws; a vote for the congressmen and senators, who enact the national laws and formulate the national policies; a vote for the president, who carries out the supreme law of the land. While it is true that in the case of the president, we vote for electors who elect the president, there has not been a single case wherein an elector has voted other than he was instructed by the people. We come together in political parties, present platforms, and every citizen has a chance to register his opinion of men and measures. The citizen has a right to vote at primary elections and register his choice for the party candidates and for the delegates to the conventions which formulate the party platforms.

Bolshevik Argument Unsound.

The bolsheviks point out that political parties do not live up to their platforms; that candidates for office default in their promises after they are elected; that representative democracy is frequently not representative of and responsive to the people. We know that there is some truth in this criticism, but we know that it is our fault. We have the power to express our wants, to record our will. We also have the power to punish our betrayal. We can recall from office recalcitrant public servants; we can add to our legislation and take over the power to initiate laws, and compel the reference of legislation back to the people before it can become operative as law. Our public officials are only our agents; we hire them, we pay them; we can fire them, disgrace them and punish them if they fail to obey our instructions. Such is our power. If we do not use the power intelligently and effectively it is our fault. If we are indifferent to the rights we possess and fail to use them, the fault is with us. Therefore, we do not condemn a system of representative government because some of the individuals who make up the government are unfit and unworthy of the rights they enjoy.

The bolsheviks appear to favor a change in the method of governing the people. The plan they have adopted is based on the theory that the people must not be trusted, but that the officeholders can. Bolshevism is government from the top down, rather than from the bottom up. They seem to go on the theory that power delegated through many hands will lose its corruption just as running water does. This political theory flies in the face of all human experience.

Bolshevik "Joker."

In our numbers we have a figure which for many years has enjoyed a peculiar reputation; it is the "jester" of numbers. It is the number "23." It is known in American slang as "skidoo." The bolsheviks inserted in the constitution a joker, and oddly enough they gave it the "skidoo" number, "23." It is found in Article 2 of the constitution:

"Being guided by the interest of the working class as a whole, the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic deprives all individuals and groups of all rights which could be utilized by them to the detriment of the socialist revolution."

Here is the big beware sign in the constitution. What does it mean; what fears must come into the minds of men and women in Russia when they read this paragraph? The constitution deprives every one, individually and collectively, of exercising any rights he or they may have which are opposed to bolshevism. Did tyranny ever impose a more arbitrary, autocratic rule? The paragraph concedes that individuals and groups have rights, and then commands the people not to dare use those rights. If their exercise might be detrimental to the Lenin-Trotsky government. The right to voice thoughts is sentenced to silence. Freedom of opinion is crushed. Who is to determine what rights, if exercised, might be detrimental to a socialist revolution? The meaning is plain as the command is stern. Fall in line with bolshevism or perish, it is the order. If you disagree with our plans and methods, be seen but not heard.

I wonder what our good friends, the militant soap boxers, who shout about freedom of speech, would think and say if in these days of unrest the congress of the United States and the president should make such a pronouncement. America, radical and conservative, would rise in protest against any such law. We live, grow and progress as a people because of our freedom of thought, speech and action. Of course, we silence the man who criminally advocates lawlessness, and we do it for the same reason that we arrest the man who spits on the sidewalk. It is to conserve the public welfare, the common good of the great majority who do not believe in violence and disorder. What would happen to our "Red" agitators if they were in Russia today instead of in the United States, and ventured a single disagreement with the bolshevik program, either in policy or methods? This constitutional provision is not a muffler on free speech, it is a gag.

What freedom can there be in a country in which opinion is shackled? How can a nation make progress except by the conflict and friction of opinion? In the United States, experience has taught us that the majority is generally right, that the many can be trusted. We have put into practice the idea that many heads are better than one. The bolshevik constitution launches the policy that wisdom can only come from a few minds—the fewer, the better. This is the method they adopted to socialize freedom of thought, freedom of speech. It means a communism of ideas, but a very limited communism. In fact, limited to the "Holy Seventeen," and the oracledictator. The people are outside the circumference of this communism. In their zone communism commands obedience and silence. The human race has fought many a fine fight to take the fetters from the minds of men, and no fight was ever made for a more essential liberty. When the mind of man is not free, what freedom can there be? The jailing of the body, serious as it is, is only a small interference with man's liberty compared with the imprisonment of his mind.

This constitutional clamp muzzles the press. Notwithstanding all the criticism which may be justly made against the press, the fact remains that the newspapers of the world have been a great force for good, a great power in securing freedom. We see the world through the eyes of the newspapers; it is our source of information; we depend upon it for the facts upon which we base our opinions. Notwithstanding the bitter partisan character of the press, few papers know party lines or party prejudice when the public interest is menaced. The press has thrown the searchlight of terrible publicity on the ratholes and driven out the political rats. The freedom of the press is indispensable to free government.

Lenine's Change of Heart.

Lenine, before he came into power, was the loudest voice in Russia, crying for free speech. His pen had been most bitter against interference with the freedom of the press. In his pamphlet, "Lessons of Revolution," he wrote:

"The printing establishments of the labor press are raided. The bolsheviks are arrested, not infrequently without accusation, or on the pretext of charges which are simply calumnies. 'It may be argued that the prosecution of the bolsheviks is by no means a violation of free speech, since only certain persons on specific charges are thus prosecuted. But such arguments bear the earmarks of premeditated untruth. For why should printing offices be raided, newspapers suppressed, for the crimes of individuals, even if these crimes are proven and sustained by law? It would be altogether different if the government declared criminal the entire bolshevik party, its ideas and views. But everyone knows that the government of free Russia never could, and indeed never attempted to do anything of the kind.'"

Lenine coming into power, wrote into the constitution a new crime. He declared all opposition to the bolshevik program a crime. On this high moral ground he struck down freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of opinion and freedom of the press.

In the language of a great radical, the time will come when the silence of the people of Russia will be more powerful than the voices throttled by the bolshevik gag today.

Message for Today.

By far the greater part of the suffering and crime which exist at this moment in civilized Europe arises simply from people not understanding this truism—not knowing that produce or wealth is eternally connected by the laws of heaven and earth with resource labor; but hoping in some way to cheat or abrogate this everlasting law of life, and to feel where they have not sown, and be warm where they have not woven. I repeat, nearly all our misery and crime result from this one misapprehension.—Ruskin.

French to Pay More for Bread.

Joseph J. B. E. Moutens, French minister of provisions, announced to the credit committee of the chamber of deputies that the government would advance the price of wheat to millers from 43 to 75 francs a metric hundred-weight and of flour to 91 francs, the government ceasing to absorb the difference in price. This will raise the price of a two-pound loaf of bread in Paris from 55 to 90 centimes and in the provinces from 60 centimes to 95 centimes.

The fellow with coal in his cellar will not feel nearly so uneasy about the contemplated coal miners' strike.

A community is not in dire straits when it is howling about a shortage of sugar in the face of one of bread material.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Look Young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Mu-Col Quickly Defeats Deadly Catarrh Germs

Says Mu-col Makes Miserable, Despondent Catarrh Sufferers Well Again in Short Time at Trifling Cost.

Here is the only sure way to get rid of catarrh, with all its obnoxious symptoms:

Go to your druggist today and say "I want a small package of MU-COL." Dissolve half a teaspoonful in a teaspoonful of warm water and stir till dissolved. Then, by snuffing up from the palm of the hand or by using nasal douche or atomizer, allow the MU-COL solution to come into contact with the infected membranes.

Almost instantly you will feel the effect, as its penetrating antiseptic properties are carried into every nook and crevice of the mucous membrane where the germs thrive and multiply, loosening up the congestion and accumulated secretions, which if not attended to now, will eventually threaten the existence of the membranes themselves. All good druggists can supply you.

His Illustrations Immortal.

Many of Dickens' pen caricatures are said to have been inspired by Habblo K. Browne, better known as "Philz," an artist caricaturist, with whose humor the author is said to have felt the temptation to keep pace.

A number of Browne's illustrations of Dickens are immortal, notable among them being Philz's indescribably jaunty Alabaster.

New Chemical Kills Bed Bugs P. D. Q.

P. D. Q. (Foxy Devils Quietus) is the name of a new colored chemical discovery by Dr. Price that actually kills the worst infested house of bedbugs.

It has been found that bedbugs do not have time to bite after you go after them with P. D. Q. A 50c package of them with P. D. Q. makes a quart of strong bug-killer, and goes farther than a barrel of the old-fashioned dangerous dopes.

P. D. Q. kills their eggs and prevents hatching. FREE a potent spout in every box to enable you to get them in the hard-to-get places, and saves juice.

HEALTH SCHOOL

Pennsylvania State Department of Health.

Questions.

1. Are children born with consumption, or do they catch it from contact with those who have it?
2. What precaution should a consumptive take to protect others?
3. What makes the material coughed up by a consumptive dangerous to others?

THREE ANGLES

The death certificate read: Minnie Allison, aged twenty, tuberculosis.

When Minnie was a child, her mother had died from tuberculosis. At twenty, Minnie, apparently in splendid health, active in war work, caught a cold she could not shake off. She lost weight and strength. The night sweats and spitting of blood, forced her to the doctor, but it was too late.

Granny Brown had prophesied many years before, that the child would inherit the disease of the mother. But Granny Brown was wrong. Minnie Allison did not inherit the disease, but contracted it. And as most cases originate in childhood, it is probable that the seeds were planted as her tuberculous mother kissed her baby lips.

These seeds had remained lying, but quiet. When her resisting forces were weakened by the strain of driving work, the germs of tuberculosis multiplied and spread, and there was another victim of galloping consumption.

Six months later Charles Wilkins replied to a letter from his cousin.

B—ville, Pa. —10.

Dear Cousin:

Shortly after I received your letter telling of the death of Minnie Allison, I saw Miss Brown, the State Nurse. I mentioned, I had been losing weight, was short of breath and felt rotten.

She said, "See a doctor." I did, and she said, "Perhaps tuberculosis." I almost collapsed. But the doctor went on: "Clear up, take it easy and protect in the air and sunshine and protect on the porch and feel the next day."

The laboratory report of what I coughed up (sputum) showed millions of germs. The doctor told me to cough into a paper cup, or paper handkerchief, to spit in a paper cup, some of which he gave me. The handkerchiefs and cups to be burned after use.

Wash my hands frequently, using paper towels. Do not have my own dishes and table utensils, which should be boiled after each use, to avoid shaking hands or kissing, particularly in regard to children. Thus I would protect my life.

I am going to get well. I wrote George Jenkins at the Mont Alto Sanatorium, asking him about the place. I expect to go there.

Your cousin,
Charles Wilkins.

Several days later the reply came from George Jenkins.

State Sanatorium, Mont Alto, Pa. —10.

Dear Charles:

Sorry to learn old T. B. has his nuptial, but don't worry, he's not the "Champ" he used to be. When he scores a knockout, it's almost always the other fellow's fault.

There are a thousand of us here and every one with a smile. I had an idea that Mont Alto was as cheerful as a bartender's convention after the first of July, but I got another thought—they sure know how to pull the strings of gloom here. "Spunk," the magazine published by the patients, matches the spirit of the place.

There are two parts to the Sanatorium. The Hospital, where the best patients are, and the Cottages where I live.

The cottages have four rooms, each with two windows which are always open. We arise at six-thirty. At seven breakfast, then back to our cottages in tidy shape. After the doctor looks us over, we go to "cure." You wonder what that is. We sit in comfortable chairs in the open air pavilions and do things. They call it "occupational therapy." Don't know what that is? I didn't either the first time I heard it. I thought it was a disease.

It's this way. A fellow comes here, he thinks he's out, he's ailed and he can't work again and he's inclined to be homesick. So they give him something to do. He gets too busy thinking about what he's doing to worry about being sick. He gets used to getting worse while he waits, he gets well while he works, and that's "Occupational Therapy."

At 10:30 we get a mug of real 18-karat milk. Dinner at noon. This Mont Alto air, sifted through the pines, 1800 feet up, makes dinner worth while. After dinner, back to our cottages. Then those who have temperance go to "cure." Milk at 2:30. Supper at five and walk at 7:30.

We have a community house where we have entertainments, motion pictures and all that sort of thing.

It doesn't cost a cent from the time you arrive, until you walk to the station agent and say "Gimme a ticket, home."

The doctor told me last week the disease was arrested. My Good news I'll say, but I'm in this fight until it's tried, found guilty and executed and then some, and when I go home you may count on me to stick to the program that pulled me through up here.

Your friend,
George Jenkins.

A consumptive should not live with children in an ill ventilated, dark, crowded house. All consumptives should be trained in the method by which they may protect others.

If needful to protect others, a consumptive may in accordance with law, be quarantined or sent to a sanatorium. Consumption may be arrested or cured by: Rest; proper diet; sunshine; fresh air, and supervised occupation.

Mrs. S. M. Galett will return to her home at Onebrook Philadelphia, after spending a month with Mr. and Mrs. T. Lansing Snyder.

TROUTVILLE LOSES BY $30,000 FIRE

As a result of a fire that started in Troutville at 8:30 o'clock last evening and burned for several hours that village sustained a loss that is estimated at $30,000 partly covered by insurance. The only means of fighting fire in Troutville is by a bucket brigade and after the blaze had secured a start that threatened to sweep the main street, an alarm was sent into DuBois. A pumper responded and made the run in good time, but the fire was practically under control by that time. The pumper went into action, however, and relieved the bucket brigade. There was a high wind sweeping this high point and the fire twice crossed the street. The fact that there was a brick house in the path of the flames prevented further spread.

The fire started in the residence occupied by Hugh Best, the explosion of a lamp being the cause. This house was destroyed as was the home adjoining, occupied by Thomas Shugarts and obnerv by L. D. Weber, of DuBois. The flames then communicated to the J. H. Lott store across the street, burning this structure as well as the Lott home. The house owned and occupied by Henry Eargood next fell a victim to the flames.

The last home destroyed was that owned by H. J. London. A stable owned by G. J. Weber was also destroyed.

The fire was plainly seen from all over the country and there was a large gathering of people from all sections to assist in fighting the flames.

FARMER KILLED BY B. & P. TRAIN NEAR DUBOIS CITY

Theodore Lewis a well known farmer was instantly killed a short distance south of DuBois at 6:45 yesterday morning when he was struck by the locomotive of the B. & P. passenger train leaving Punxsutawney at 6 o'clock.

Lewis was driving a team of horses across the tracks near his farm. He was walking behind them and stood alongside the tracks while a freight train passed. He did not hear the approach of the passenger train and drove the team onto the tracks almost in front of the speeding passenger train. The horses crossed the tracks and were not injured but the pilot of the locomotive struck Lewis and hurled him from the tracks, killing him instantly.

The deceased, who was 63 years of age, was single, and the past 28 years had made his home with T. J. Wayne, of near DuBois.

The wall safes opened, the papers stolen, the pearls gone, the anonymous notes, the blackmail threats, the loss of your job, the voices you've heard. Now on this outer circle will mark down all the people who might be mixed up in these things—mind ye, I say only might be. First, there's Lefty Moore's woman—we know she's a crook. Then who do we know that knows her? There's at least two—Mr. Wick, the superintendent that hired her, and this Mr. Henry Kent, whose apartment she telephoned to. They there's all the rest of the help in the house. Any one of them might be her pal. Then there's the flighty Bradford girl—

"You don't suspect her, do you?" I cried, horrified at the prospect of his investigation taking this turn.

"Be easy," he retorted. "I'm not suspecting anyone. I'm only putting them down. There's the Bradford girl and her ex-husband. He's a big amat and that makes him a crook. Those two men you saw in the park, one of them with a scar on his face—we'll run them down. You know a cafe the scar-faced man goes to, so that's a start. There's the man who shadowed you—would you know him again if you saw him?"

I shook my head doubtfully.

"I'm afraid not," I admitted, "you see—"

"Don't bother to explain. You either would or wouldn't, and that's all we need to know now. There's old Mr. Gaston and his wife. It's queer about their ducking out so suddenly and leaving no address, but maybe they're only scared. Let's see who else is there—the Bradford servants and the old man's, the old washwoman—and the families who live in the house. We've got the circle pretty well covered, haven't we?"

More and more I had begun to appreciate how valuable the services of an experienced detective would be likely to be in helping to solve the mystery.

"Look here, Gorman," I said, "why can't you take charge of this case for us?"

"What's in it?" he asked.

My face fell, and my enthusiasm died a sudden death. Once more I was confronted by the specter of my poverty. Of what use my talking to a high-priced investigator like Gorman when all the money I had in the world was less than two hundred dollars, out of which I had to live until I found employment. Yet I must serve Barbara Bradford.

"If you clear up this case," I announced, "I'll give you every cent I've got in the world."

He shook his head.

"It ain't enough. If I take this case, it won't be for the money that's in it. For that matter I can get all I want from old Gaston for getting his pearls back. That'll be enough."

"Then you will take the case," I cried jubilantly.

"On one condition. That you'll promise to keep everything away from the police."

"I promise that for myself and Miss Bradford, too. That was the one reason she advanced against my telling you about things. She was afraid you'd call in the police."

"Never fear about that. There's nothing I'd like better than to put it over that bunch of young reformers they've got down in Center street. This hotel work don't suit me, anyhow. I've been thinking of opening up an office of my own. The recovery of the Gaston pearls would be a nice feather in my cap to start with."

"I see," I replied, "but you'll need money for expenses and that sort of thing, won't you? I have—"

"Leave that part of it to me," he retorted with a quizzical smile. "After all the years I was on the police force I ain't exactly broke by a long shot. All you've got to do is to keep your eyes open and let me know all that goes on in the apartment house. I'll attend to the rest. Don't do anything, though, without consulting me first."

"I'll gladly promise that."

"Good enough. We'd better arrange then to meet here every day at three sharp. It's as good a place as any."

"I'll be here."

"And look out you're not trailed. They may try shadowing you again."

"Who do you mean by they?" I asked eagerly.

"Them that trailed you yesterday," replied Gorman with a grin. "If you don't know, I don't know either—yet."

From his manner I was confident that he already had a shrewd suspicion as to the identity of some of the persecutors. The maze in the center of which he had placed Miss Bradford and myself meant far more to him, undoubtedly, than it did to me. More than likely his vast knowledge of the methods of criminals and his acquaintance with others like Lefty Moore

NEW TASTELESS CASTOR OIL IS EASY TO TAKE

Strength and Purity Remain the Same, but All Unpleasant Taste Is Removed.

A remarkable process, perfected by the chemists of Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., has resulted in great improvement in castor oil, the old family remedy. This new TASTELESS CASTOR OIL has the same strength and purity as the old-fashioned kind. Nothing has been removed but the taste. KELLOGG'S TASTELESS CASTOR OIL is precisely what the name says—ABSOLUTELY TASTELESS. Think what this means to mothers and children. When the doctor says, "Give them castor oil," there need no longer be any trouble. Children need never know they are taking castor oil. Grown-ups will also appreciate the difference between KELLOGG'S TASTELESS CASTOR OIL and the old-fashioned nauseating kind. Insist on Kellogg's if you want a REALLY tasteless castor oil. At all good druggists. Two sizes, 5c and 65c. (Advt.)

BIG CIRCUS CARRIES SOME HOTEL

The "cook tent" is one of the marvels of the modern circus. It was the custom for many years for the management to send its employees to the local "city" hotels for their food. The undertaking for providing the meals for the army on the grounds was so stupendous that the best regulated made the accomplishment necessary. As the circus grew in size the combined efforts of hotels and restaurants were unable to meet the demand, thrust upon them.

B. E. Wallace was the first man to carry a complete commissary department with his army, and later other shows followed in pursuit. Advanced men now see that all needs of the commissary department are supplied meat, vegetables, and the other requirements await the hands of a dozen chefs. There are two separate and distinct culinary departments with the Huguenot-Wallace circus, which comes to Clearfield, Tuesday, May 25, for performances at 2 and 8 p. m.

Those whose stomachs are not satisfied until the tents are raised and all the paraphernalia is on the lot. This is a wise idea, which insures prompt and happy work.

Under a nearby canvas are fed the executive staff, performers, men, women and children of the circus. There are neat tables, table cloths and china dishes. There is a bill of fare and one may find anything that is supplied in the dining room of the best metropolitan hotel. The food is cooked in the open and it has its own peculiar appetizing flavor. It is served in abundance, and a happier, heartier body never did more justice to a meal.

Skilful waiters, neatly attired in white, do prompt attendance. As the "cook tent" are the first to be raised in the morning, they are necessarily the first to be packed away on the "flying squadron" at night, that breakfast may be served at 7 o'clock the following day in a town probably a hundred miles away, in another state.

For Matrons—Brilliant Hats

MODISTES and costumers may make clothes in greater variety and quantity for young women than for matrons, but it is the matron's outfitting that gives them most concern.

In the province of millinery the designing of matrons' hats is of such importance that gifted men and women give all their time to it. In the group shown here four semi-dress hats are pictured.

The hat at the top of the group is a spirited shape of brilliant black straw that recalls the Napoleon. The high tuster of the braid and the flues in the shape, are both contributors to the smart style of this model, which is less trimmed than any of its companions. It has an ornament made of long glycerined ostrich flues and celadon foliage.

The handsome turban of black moire ribbon and a jet ornament at the left of the group is a Russian inspiration in which very rich ribbon is very cleverly draped over a frame. This is a handsome hat, with plenty of character that might be made in any rich color or in black. Facing it a familiar straw shape is almost covered with very large, flat silk blossoms partly veiled with malines; those on top of the crown give it additional height. A shape of string-colored braid with blue or American Beauty shades in the trimming would be handsome, the malines in the same color as the hat; or the flowers might be in several colors.

The last hat is built on a shape of luscious blond, which may be imagined in dark blue or brown or black, with a very high drapery of "hairnet" cloth, veiling a few handsome roses in natural shades. A collar of ribbon with bow at the left side, completes an ideal of becoming smartness in matrons' hats. This hair-net cloth is a novelty in millinery materials that is specially well suited to hats for older women.

QUALITY!

We believe that a store like this owes something to the public beyond the mere gathering and selling of merchandise—that it has no business selling poor goods, no matter whether the buyer has discerning judgment or not.

We believe it is the duty of a store to make sure its goods are worthy before they reach its counters, and that they answer every test of excellence and trustworthiness to which a strict business policy subjects them. Perhaps in all the years that we have been in business we have carried this policy to the extreme by measuring every article we sell by the severe test of QUALITY. Quality is the guiding spirit of this store. Quality first, quality last, quality at all times. Quality is the keynote of our stocks—that honest, dependable quality that carries with it the assurance of lasting satisfaction. If we elect to speak of QUALITY FIRST, it is simply because quality is the chief manifestation of economy and value.

What does quality mean to YOU when goods are talked of? Quality! Quality of materials and of making. Quality in the raw materials, quality in the finished goods, quality in the designs, quality in the styles, quality so uniform and complete, that fabrics, designs and workmanship appear to be the perfection of a single process rather than the miracle of many.

These things are carried to the extreme here. Our selections are made with the greatest care. We search below the surface, looking for weaknesses and defects. We discard every article that we believe would in any way prove unworthy, when placed to the test of actual use.

We know that our care is appreciated by our friends—the buying public. We know that people everywhere have learned that buying here is safe; that they can depend on whatever comes from this store; and that our standard of quality means something. Where quality is, satisfaction is, and that is the place to spend your money. And while we do not wish to dismiss the question of price lightly—for prices here are always consistent with the qualities offered—yet we wish to emphasize that our last word, as well as the first, on goods purchased here must be QUALITY.

A. W. LEONARDSON & CO.

IT'S AN ECONOMY TO DO ALL YOUR BUYING IN A STORE WHERE ONE PRICE IS THE RULE

It's a fact that stores where two prices for the same goods is the rule have a greater expense than the one price store—for when a sale is made in a store of this kind the customer must be sold twice—once on quality and once on price—all of which takes extra time—extra time means extra clerks—extra clerks means greater prices to the customer. So while a two price store will break the first price asked you may sure that you pay more than you should in the end.

How different in a store like this where the one price system is the rule—here we mark our goods at a fair profit—and we can do it because here a customer is sold only once—either on price or quality, which eliminates the extra expense that means extra costs to you, this method allows a quicker outlet for goods which means an additional reduction in costs, and last but not least you never leave this store with the suspicion that perhaps after all you have been imposed upon in your purchase. Think it over, we are sure that you will realize the wisdom of shopping here where the one price system is the rule and our Money Back Guarantee goes with each sale.

Short Story About Shellac

Shellac is the joint product of insects and plants and comes from India. The lac insects are about 1.25 of an inch long, a bright red in color. They suck the juices of plants, digest them and exude them in the form of resin, which soon encases the whole insect. When the young insects have swarmed out, the resin is scraped from the branches, ground, washed, mixed with colophony and orpiment, cooked slowly and drawn out into the thin sheets we know as shellac.

AN INTERVIEW WITH "A. W."

It is not every store that has built up such a large volume of business as the store of A. W. Leonardson Company.

Fifteen years ago, or to be exact, in May, 1905, A. W. Leonardson and F. G. Lindholm came to this city and purchased what was then the H. A. Kratzer store. From its very inception the firm made a reputation for fair dealing and this reputation grew not only in this city, but went to every hamlet and town within a trading radius of Clearfield.

By mutual consent the firm of Lindholm & Leonardson was dissolved in July 31, 1905, and has continued under the present name and present management.

In an interview with the Progress man upon the subject Mr. Leonardson said: "When I started this business I made it my aim to fully satisfy my customers, as a satisfied customer is a merchant's best asset."

I made up my mind that any person who made a purchase in this store and was not fully satisfied with the price and quality after they had inspected the purchase in their own home, I would make it an infallible rule that the purchase price should be returned without a question.

That this policy was popular was shown by the ever increasing trade that came to this store. Another policy I kept in mind from the time I planned to go into business, would give the best possible values for the money that could be given, and our keynote should be service.

I have always endeavored to train my salespeople to know as much about their wares as I did; that they could answer all sorts of questions about the uses and origin of the goods or material.

To show the finest grade of merchandise, and to show it first, was another of the thoughts that I had even before this store was opened, and will always be the paramount idea with every buyer in the store."

Mr. Leonardson then went on to

A Plain Statement of Fact

We are among the thousands of merchants throughout the nation who are helping to break the backbone of high prices. Therefore we have decided to give our customers for 9 days only a discount of from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. on almost everything in the store.

It is impossible for us to give a discount of 20 per cent. on everything in the store as all of our merchandise is marked at a very close margin of profit.

We advise you to supply your needs in this sale for many months to come.

WE STUDY TO PLEASE OUR CUSTOMERS BRANCHES IN EUROPE OUR BUYERS' PLAN

"To study hard, to think quietly, to act frankly, talk gently"—that was the creed of a noble man. And this store profits by those words of wisdom, for it believes that it is never too late nor are we ever too old to learn.

We study to please with service, showing the new things while they are yet new, having the variety that lends zest to the customer's choice, and prices that will be fair to us both. If we do not "act frankly" you will find us out, and unless we talk courteously—call it "gently" if you will—then we weaken in self-respect because it is the "worst wheel on the cart that makes the most noise." We study to please.

A Native Acacia

Southern California boasts one native species of acacia, the cat's claw (a Greville), which is but a shrub in that state, but becomes a tree in Arizona. It bears small pale yellow flowers and an abundance of very sharp thorns.

tell how the store was started at Kane, Pa., in 1903, and then stores in DuBois, Warren and Meadville following in close succession. The same broad business policies prevail in all these stores and, taken as a whole, they are the finest bunch of stores of their kind in Western Pennsylvania.

Resident Buyers Firm to Establish Permanent Offices in Europe

Kirby, Block & Fischer, resident buyers, are planning to establish permanent branch offices in the important trade centers of Europe, and perhaps in the Orient also. For this purpose John Block, of the firm, will go abroad in a few months.

Joseph Fischer, of the firm, now is on La France on his way to Europe. He intends to get first-hand information of merchandise and freight conditions abroad, and will travel in France, England, Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Although his trip is primarily to get information, he will purchase select articles and fancy goods if he finds prices favorable. He has been a buyer of toilet articles and fancy goods for twenty years, beginning his career in 1900 with The Dry Goods Union.

Aaron B. C. Kirby will sail after the other members of the firm return and will make purchases of silk and cotton yarn goods for 1921 delivery.

"Poor Richard."

Poor Richard was the "pen name," the name assumed by Benjamin Franklin in a series of almanacs published from 1732 to 1757. These almanacs contain maxims and precepts on temperance, economy, cleanliness, chastity and other homely virtues, and to several of the maxims are added the words, "As Poor Richard says."

Formation of Asbestos.

Asbestos is found in fissures of rock and it is believed that, when the rock was forming and still hot, water penetrated the fissures, widened them and dissolved some of the silica and magnesia. On drying, these crystallized as a hydrated silicate of magnesia, forming threadlike crystals building up from opposite walls of the fissure and meeting in the middle.

Wasn't Quite Ready for Ride.

As the farm where we stayed last summer was out of the beaten track of automobiles, Bobby was both curious and afraid of our car when we came there. At first nothing would induce him to take a ride in it. After one of our uncles to just sit in it, he drew his seven-year-old sister (who certainly was not afraid of the car) down to him and whispered in a most serious manner: "Tell those people when I get older and tamer I'll ride with them."

Elements' Gifts to the Deity.

There is an old myth that recounts the offering made by the elements as gifts to the deity. The air gave a rainbow, fire a meteor, the earth a ruby and the sea a pearl. The rainbow made a halo around the god. The meteor served as a lamp. The ruby decorated his forehead and the pearl was worn upon his heart.

The Unpopular Atchoo!

Plentywood Press—"I sneezed a sneeze into the air, it fell to earth I knew not where; but hard and cold were the looks of those in whose vicinity I sneeze!"—Boston Transcript.

Forceful Warning.

A road sign in New York says, "Go Slow and Save Ten Dollars."

Microbes With a Double Life.

The transformation of microbes from one form to another has been described by many investigators, and it has even been suggested that the same microbe in different forms may be responsible for different diseases.

Don't Overlook Little Things.

The young fellow who thinks that little things are not worth bothering about stands a slim chance of ever having any big things to look after. Big things grow from little things. The tallest oak was once an acorn.

Taffetas for Summer Wear

THERE are so many pretty taffeta dresses this season, made up in so many ways, that it seems almost an entire wardrobe might be assembled from among them, if all other fabrics were barred. Then, to add to their diversity, designers have hit upon combinations of taffeta and organza, taffeta and net, and taffeta and lace.

An example of original and beautiful designing, the dress at the left of the two shown above will interest every lover of taffeta. Its bodice is cut on kimono lines, but departs from them with a wide flare in elbow sleeves and its fascinating at the back. It has a round neck and extends six or eight inches below the waistline. The skirt at the front forms a panel extending a little way above the waist and merging into the bodice in a "Y"-shaped opening outlined with embroidery in silk. In the back it terminates at the waist line.

The bodice forms a narrow yoke at each side over the hips and the skirt is fastened to the yoke in a series of pencil folds, bordered with a narrow band of silk in a lighter shade than the frock. This light silk faces the sleeves that are turned back to reveal it and gathered under a small disk of embroidery above the facing. An unexpected detail in the management of this frock is the flared skirt gathering at the bottom.

Another pretty taffeta, shown at the right, is made on more familiar lines but contrives to be just as pleasing as its rival. Its bodice with turned-back elbow sleeves has a group of small tucks at each side and a soft girle that fastens under one large ornament at the right side. Narrow frills of the taffeta, set on in bands at the front and back and across the hips at the side, make a charming trimming. A frill of lace about the round neck provides a youthful neck dress. Necks in this style invite the use of beautiful old lace collars shaped to fit them and already they have made their appearance.

Julia Bottomly

Millwood Birds.

The millwood birds are concealed in a pod, which breaks open and exposes them to the wind. Up they go through the air, each seed carried by a ball of silken down, the threads so frail that you are astonished when you examine them with a microscope. Each thread turns out to be a separate tube clothed with dark cotton-like streaks arranged in an irregular manner. When a millwood pod bursts open, you can imagine yourself in a miniature seed meet, in which scores of white craft soar up into the morning wind.

Beaver's Habits Fixed.

A careful study of beaver indicates that their acts, habits and customs are all instinctive, having in no way improved or advanced their original customs since the discovery of the species. They build their dams and lodges, provide their food supply and pursue the same course as they did thousands of years ago.

Introduction of English Walnuts.

The English walnut came to the Pacific coast in 1867, when Joseph Sexton of Santa Barbara, Cal., brought a sack of nuts from Chile and grew 1,000 trees at Goleta.

Isle of Napoleon's Exile.

False conceptions prevail of St. Helena, where Napoleon lived and died after his defeat and humiliation at Waterloo. It is credited with being a most ugly island. Exactly the opposite is the case. Not only is it not a rock, but a very beautiful, well-wooded and well-watered island, and also, on the whole, if one had to choose the most perfect climate existing anywhere in this world, the prize would have to go to St. Helena, and especially that part in which Longwood (Napoleon's residence) is situated.

Proof of a Proverb.

Clothes do not make the man. If they did there would be many more good men.—Buffalo Enquirer.

Origin of "Pitched Battle."

"A pitched battle" originated in the days of knight-errantry and was called then because boiling pitch was used by the defenders of a feudal castle to repel the attacking force. The battles, which usually took place outside the castle walls, would soon end when the boiling pitch began to flow from a tank on top of the walls. This originated the term "a pitched battle."

Some Whispering!

According to an ancient Irish superstition, a vicious horse could be tamed by whispering the creed in its right ear Fridays and in its left ear on Wednesdays till it was cured, which was merely a matter of time, unless it had been born at Whitsonville, in which case it was incurable.

Change of Tone Tells Much.

Susceptible persons are more affected by a change of tone than by unexpected words.—George Eliot.

LEONARDSON'S FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY SECTION

Simplicity for Younger Girls

IN DRESSING the miss from six to sixteen almost everyone agrees that she looks her best in simple frocks. Simplicity is the foundation of styles as they are created for her by people who give their talent and time to a task that is a long way from easy. Two white frocks for girls from twelve to sixteen years, the efforts of experts, are shown here for the benefit of mothers who must settle the matter of dresses for graduation day and other days. These models can be made up in any of the lovely colors in organdy or voile.

This frock is made with plain blouse and straight, moderately full skirt. Instead of tucks, there are wide bands about both the blouse and skirt set on the underside and hem stitched to place. A color might be used in these bands but there is an advantage in all white, since it can be worn over colored underslips as well as over white, and two or three slips provided for the same dress. The waist has a round neck finished with a deep roll of voile and narrower fulls make the turned back cuffs. The pretty be-horn hat, trimmed with small flowers suits the dress exactly.

One of many organdy dresses designed for the younger graduates, has a bodice with deep "V" neck introducing a small chemise of tucked organdy, and a wide plain collar. There are elbow sleeves with turned back cuffs. Plain and tucked organdy make the skirt, the tucked side panels having groups of seven narrow tucks at wide intervals across them. Small, round button fasteners are placed on the skirt where the tucks are joined to the plain front and back panels and a very small side drape in the skirt is allowed as a concession to sixteen years and the dignity and importance of graduation day.

Grease Spots.
When grease is spilled on a hardwood floor it can be hardened and scraped off if cold water is poured on. If it is not detected immediately, cover the grease spot with starch or powdered chalk, which will absorb most of the grease. It can then be washed off with hot soapsuds.

Big Dish for Birds.
Hundreds of embryo caterpillars are destroyed at a single swallow by the nuthatches and chickadees hunting about the birches during winter, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington, and even the crows have been known to eat the little varnished pellets of eggs.

BREAD BAKED IN DIFFERENT WAYS

Whatever Method Is Used Resulting Loaf Should Be Appetizing and Wholesome.

LARGEST SINGLE FOOD ITEM

Some of Points Which Cause Failure Are Wrong Selection of Materials and Utensils—Essentials Are Urged by Specialists.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Bread is the largest single item of food in the diet of the great majority of people, and of the staple foods probably no other can be so easily spoiled in the preparation. Some women, after a few failures in bread making, give up the attempt and buy their bread. Very many of us are partial to home made loaf. In many localities it is necessary to bake bread at home, in others it is a convenience, and in very many it is done from choice. It is not difficult to make good bread, and it is worth while to learn to do so.

Some of the points which cause failure in bread making are the wrong choice of materials and utensils, lack of absolute cleanliness, carelessness in measuring the ingredients, poor methods of mixing and molding and improper care of the dough while it is rising, also wrong care of the loaf while it is baking, or wrong care of the loaves after they are taken from the oven.

The necessary materials for bread making are flour, water, salt, and yeast. The materials occasionally used are milk, sugar, and fat. Good wheat bread can be made by a number of processes. Three recommended by the United States department of agriculture food specialists follow:

Short or Straight-Dough Process.
2 cups lukewarm $\frac{1}{2}$ cup liquid yeast
milk, water or $\frac{1}{2}$ 2 tablespoons salt
mixture of the two 2 tablespoons sugar
1 cake compressed yeast if used 2 tablespoons or 1 spoon or less $\frac{1}{2}$ cups lukewarm 6 cups or 3 pints milk, water or sifted flour
mixture of the two

Original bulk of dough, 1 quart;
bulk when ready to be made into loaves, $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 quarts. This will make 2 loaves.

Boil the water or scald the milk.
Put the sugar and salt (and fat, if used) into a mixing bowl. Pour the hot liquid over it and allow it to become lukewarm. Mix the yeast with a little of the lukewarm liquid and add it to the rest of the liquid. If convenient, set this aside in a warm
place, not over 80 degrees Fahrenheit,
for 1 hour, if not convenient to
set it aside add the flour at once
putting in a little at a time and knead

ing until the dough is of such consistency that it sticks neither to the bowl nor to the hands. This requires

After the Baking Place Bread on a Rack in a Clean Place Where the Wind Can Blow on It.

about 10 minutes. Cover, and allow
to rise 1 1/2 hours at a temperature of 80 degrees, it may be better to set it
at a lower temperature, but the lower
the temperature the longer the time
required for the rising.

Cut down the dough from the sides
of the bowl, raise the hands slightly.
Knead a little and set aside to rise
again for 1 hour. With a good bread
flour, the dough should triple its bulk
in each rising. With a soft wheat
flour it should not rise much beyond
twice its volume. Divide into portions,
mold and place in greased pans of standard size (1 1/2 quarts). Allow to rise until a light touch will make a slight dent. With good bread flour
this happens when the dough reaches
the top of the pans. Bake 50 minutes
in a medium hot oven.

Overnight Sponge Method.
Use the same proportions as for the
short process, except in the case of
the yeast, which should be one eighth
cake of compressed yeast or 2 table-
spoonsful of liquid yeast for each loaf.
Use water rather than milk. In the evening mix the yeast with water, salt,
and half of the flour, and beat thoroughly. Cover and place at a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit,
or that of an ordinary room. In the morning add the sugar and the rest of the flour and proceed as in the case
of the short process.

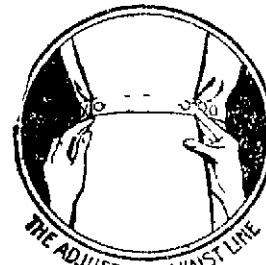

Harmony Above All.
A garden should not be considered
as a piece of wild nature, nor plants
regarded as architectural ornaments,
for the must not do violence to the other. Above all must there be harmony. Otherwise the builder has built a ruin. For this reason a garden that is a ruin is a ruin.

Experts Train Canary Birds.
Many owners of canary birds employ expert trainers to educate their pets. Others, folks who have more time and patience, do the work of training themselves. Tutoring high-class canaries has come into its own as a regular business and many persons are now living on the incomes of such "professorships."
